

Home / Two Arab female designers to watch out for at Milan Fashion Week

Two Arab female designers to watch out for at Milan Fashion Week

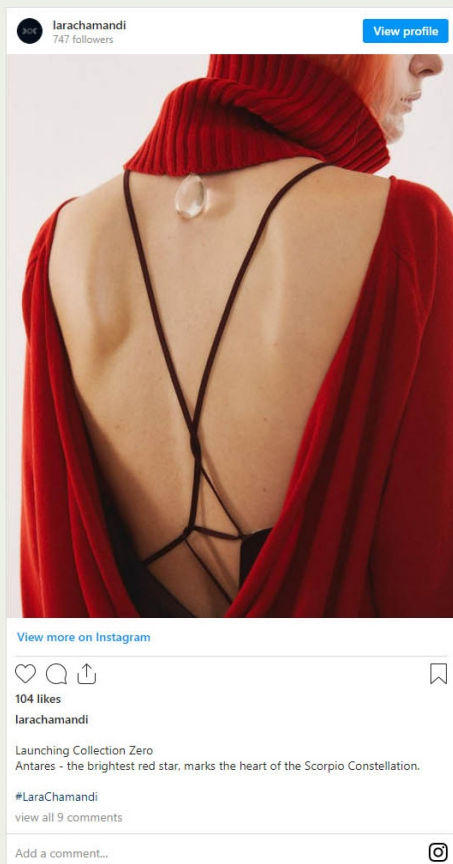

Zineb Hazim is a Moroccan designer based in Milan. Instagram

Short Url <https://arab.news/bzlv3>

Meanwhile, Milan-based Chamandi will be debuting her luxury namesake womenswear brand this season.

Inspired by the moon, more specifically, her favorite place in her homeland, the Monastery of the Moon in Lebanon's Chouf Mountains, the collection is also peppered with references to the constellations, particularly Scorpio, and other elements such as crystals and fire.

Chamandi's Fall 2022 collection reflects many of the moon's effects, including its gravitational pull on the tides, through the fluidity of the designs and fabric, all while making sure pieces are versatile and evoke confident femininity.

The range is also eco-conscious, using sustainable plant-based "leather." She is presenting the collection via private appointments.

In addition to a new jewelry line in the works, Chamandi is set to debut a special 20-piece capsule collection for spring, which will be available on the brand's e-commerce website launching on March 2 — the day of the new moon.

Latest Updates

Saudi Arabia, Kuwait agree to develop joint Dorra gas field

✓ 828

Saudi based digital loan broker Arib raises $2.3m in seed round

✓ 776

UK Home Office prevents married couple being together for birth of first child

✓ 1137

Moody's assigns a first time rating of A3 with stable outlook to SNB Capital

✓ 735

Saudi crown prince and Brazil president review bilateral relations during phone call

✓ 1805