Pacific Sofa by Patricia Urquiola

A soft, enveloping collection that cocoons in curves

The new Pacific collection provides an intimate seating experience that is like being wrapped in a protective and relaxing cocoon. With its rounded, oversized shapes, it evokes the relaxed atmosphere of the American West Coast, from which it takes its name.

In the Pacific sofa, hard edges are banned while the soft shapes are enhanced with the use of "couture" details. The soft, woolly upholstery was chosen to give an extraordinarily tactile experience, with a choice of sophisticated boucle, plush wool or luxurious velvet.

Loveland Sofa & Loveseat Armchair by Patricia Urquiola

Lowland and Lowseat, two seating systems designed by Patricia Urquiola for Moroso in 2000, are revised and 'reused' through a different approach to sustainability, which enhances an existing product by transforming it into an (ever)green piece.

In the Loveland upholstered system, elegantly coherent with the original design, seats and backrests are softer and gentler, while the tubular steel has been replaced by solid wooden bases. The new design choices enhance the architectural qualities of the series while maintaining the sophisticated rationalist mood of this sofa, as a stand-alone piece or in a composition.

Gogan Sofa by Patricia Urquiola

Flat stones sculpted by wind and water

The Gogan collection takes its name from nature and in particular from Japanese stones rendered smooth by time and water, which provided the inspiration for this project.

This is the name given to the Japanese stones placed to protect and embellish the banks of rivers and lakes. The sofa's form, as much as the armchair's form, in fact reminds us of flat stones sculpted by wind and water, solid yet smooth enough that you can lie on them.

Just like in rock sculptures, where stones maintain their balance by being carefully positioned and interlocked, it is the shape that maintains the balance between the elements on the Gogan sofa and armchair, which is not overly regular. By playing around with gravity and balance, we can make normally heavy shapes lightweight.

The seats are soft and irregular with the centre of gravity being slightly inclined towards the rear. This gives exceptional comfort and allows the backrest to be kept lower. The backrest and seat are joined by abutments, which lend the sofa a sense of lightness, so that it appears as if it was suspended above the ground.

Redondo Sofa by Patricia Urquiola

A quilted West-coast vibe

A collection with a distinctive two-part shape, the padded shell embraces the huge seat cushions. Its curves are shown off by the total absence of sharp corners and the softness of the fabric, and the quilted decoration where the thread, like the lines of a pencil, draws an elegant three-dimensional form to call to the senses. In its design, Redondo is inspired by 1950s and 60s American cars- their upholstered interiors, the soft curves of their bodywork, and on-the-road comfort for long coast-to-coast drives. To the observer, it is the stage for scenes for everyday life.

Elements upholstered in polyurethane foam in varied densities and polyester fiber on wood frame. Seat cushions are in polyurethane foam and polyester fiberfill. Optional back pillows are in goose down. The covers of the Redondo collection are removable.

Gentry Armchairs & Gentry Extra Light Sofa by Patricia Urquiola

Finesse becomes part of the design canon

A project whose origins lie in the search for meticulous and well-balanced comfort, restrained yet with a nod to exaggeration. Gentry is about tradition, distinction and belonging but brave enough to gently poke fun at the negative connotations of 'bourgeois'. Above all the sofa communicates a way-of-being, a sensitive approach to finding the right balance between discipline and freedom. The large independent seat- and back-cushions mean that the sofa is comfortable when the user sits up properly but that it is also great for lounging around on, and forgetting about "good manners".

Gentry Extra Light evolves from the reassuring solidity of the first Gentry, focusing on the feminine high heel play. While springing up, it winks and seduces, never denying its strong personality.

Mathilda Table & Mathilda Chairs by Patricia Urquiola

Beyond modern, but not too far

An everyday object, an easily recognized shape from our collective memory, that is why it feels familiar, there is something of a resemblance. Mathilda is a modern design in the architectural sense, in the proportions between the whole and the detail. The concept is simple, perfect for its intended use: two trestles, which give solidity and affinity, hold the seat and act as a support for the backrest while also making the chairs stackable. Considered, careful intuition brings the design bang up-to-date to create a seating system which is coherent, practical and instantly recognizable.

Covers are not removable. The chair is stackable up to 3.

Klara Armchair by Patricia Urquiola

The importance of blending design, craftsmanship and the decorative arts

An armchair which is both functional and decorative, which feels artisan-made but has a contemporary look. Klara has a frame straight from experimental design with an extremely precise form, where the armrests, freed from the backrest, are structurally independent. The project is a reinterpretation of the spirit of the first forays into industrial design, based on a close collaboration between art, industry and craft. Stylishly comfortable, it is reminiscent of the first mass produced pieces of the early 20th century, also in its use of woven Vienna straw, a craft technique commonly used in the Friuli region of Italy a century ago.

Love Me Tender Sofa by Patricia Urquiola

Capture the solid's lightness, all its softness, and transform it into a design project. Patricia Urquiola trusts her intuition and designs a modular system in a new shape and construction. Her technical approach features an aluminium frame, rounded wooden legs, an abundance of cushions, tables and horizontal surfaces. Just a few easily assembled interchangeable parts. The result surprises and deceives the senses. The fullness of the modules is contrasted by the lightness of the platforms that seem capable of defying gravity as imaginary structures on stilts suspended over the floor. The legs that appear to have little to do with the frame are actually the pillars that can be anchored to it and grouped in multiple compositions. The covering in soft wool jersey that stretches in both width and length fits and outlines the forms with the elegant accuracy of the pleating in continuation of the approach first expressed with M.a.s.s.a.s. in 2012.

Paper Planes Armchair By Doshi + Levien

Outsized origami

Functional sculpture, comfortable and welcoming seating which is both durable and light, and seemingly gravity-defying. Paper Planes originated from a fabric design based around graph paper: its shape comes from the folding and modelling of paper as an exploration of form and structure, to create angles, lines and polygons. Its seeming simplicity demands masterful sartorial skill: the lines of the fabric must be perfectly aligned with the geometry of the chair which means that there is no room for error.

Ruff Armchairs by Patricia Urquiola

An object that inhabits the space it is placed in

Ruff, Getlucky's "sister" armchair, is designed by Patricia Urquiola for the contract and hospitality sectors, and indeed any living space, as it offers the ideal forum for a conversation.

The wide armrests lie on the sides of the seat section and wrap around it firmly, even though they have just one single joint. The result is the harmonious combination between curved and straight lines – a simple geometry which creates and architectural interaction with the surrounding space. The Ruff armchair has a functional shape, while its personality does not give up being an object that inhabits the space it is placed in.

Armada by Doshi & Levien

Armada' is a sculptural seating collection that was designed for open work and lounge spaces. The blown forms of the armchairs billow out from the seat like wind filled sails, creating a sense of lightness and movement, while providing degrees of privacy and seclusion. The form language explores the use of surface and volume through a combination of thin upholstered sides with voluminous soft cushions on the inside providing comfort for working on the move. The collection consists of a high and low back armchair and a fully upholstered dining chair on a pedestal.

Rows

by Patricia Urquiola

With linear forms and clear-cut symmetries, the Rows collection by Patricia Urquiola is geometrical and minimalist, expressing a refined artistic concept. Doors, side panels and table bases are both formal and decorative. The curved milled edge running the length of the surface is inspired by the nature morte of Amédée Ozenfant, a French writer and painter who founded the Purism movement.

Urquiola also conveys the expressivity of form in the two rectangular tables. Both pieces show a strong contrast between the solidity of structure, the graphic effect of the surfaces and the linearity of the table top, available in wood, back-painted glass or marble. The Vertical table, designed with a nod to classical architecture, brings to mind the fluting of a column. The sculpture influence is even more evident in Diagonal, a table whose perpendicular geometry and oblique lines add more movement to the structure.

Matrix

The collection "Matrix", a series of hand woven rugs created with an intricate mixture of viscose and wool that plays on the shiny-matt effect of the two materials, transforming a delicate pattern into a refined monochromatic look.

The 7 Playds by Elena Sanguaneko

The throw collection created by Elena Sanguaneko is based on a very specific concept in which past techniques are reworked with a modern approach. Darning, patchwork, selvedges, embroidery effects and floating threads are the applications carried out on throws strictly woven with manual looms. The 7 Playds have been made using manual loom weaving techniques (manual flying shuttle looms) and are distinguished by their craftsmanship and high-quality raw materials.

In this world of mass production, handmade products also have significant value from a human perspective. These exquisite, rare products represent different production techniques and offer buyers what they are made of, namely time and beauty.

Designed and made in Italy by Elena Sanguaneko exclusively for Moroso, the project is dedicated to every woman who has sought out and found her passion in life. Each plaid is named after a woman who represented part of the designer's human and professional growth.

Clarissa by Patricia Urquiola

A seat and its double: on one side it encloses and protects, on the other it opens up and welcomes. A clear ambivalence which elaborately separates form and content, image and concept, the name hood hints at this double function. The hood is both an ancient and contemporary urban symbol; it protects and frames the face but it can also hide it, signaling a refusal to communicate or interact. The impact is intense, and everything is a game of contrast: the three-dimensional seat seems to imply the two-dimensionality of a drawing, the overlapping colours don't divide but complement, tension isn't alleviated but stabilized. Clarissa is a dynamic easy chair, ready for action but open to relaxation, the temporary suspension of a civility. A combination of competition and collaboration, provocation and aesthetics.

PostKrisi

Catellani & Smith

PostKrisi is a collection in which light interacts with colour and shape, in a delightful interplay of transparencies and contrasts. The form ensnares the light, shaping and projecting enchanting, bewitching shadows onto the wall, amplifying their effect with the jagged, fringed edges that create a material effect able to strike a contrast with the elegant metal structures.

Shadows by Isabella Sodi

The Shadows collection reinterprets three different ancient knotting techniques of oriental craftsmen in a modern key. The collection includes all the colors and suggestions from the natural world, merged into a sophisticated balance. In this blend of fibers and weaves, the artful touches of slight imperfections are expertly measured to create carpets that also enhance the allure of instinct and skilled craftsmanship.

The collection, conceived as second reading of the Persian rug, takes its inspiration from the lenticular Israeli artist Yaacov Agam who, together with Victor Vasarely, revolutionized the world of optic perception in art. An iridescent collection, capable of moving from the vivid colors of daytime to the less bright shades of the evening, just like the mirror of water of a lake changes its reflection.

Hunua by Piero Lissoni

In this collection, even the name, Hunua, reflects the deliberately universal nature of the project. Unua is in fact the first book ever written in Esperanto, a symbol of universal dialogue between peoples, fruit of the cultural nomadism that now enriches our past traditions with new meanings. Within each rug the different weaves, constructed tone-on-tone to create a single composition, form a visual whole that gives the sense of a precious and varied mosaic: its structure is that of an elegant collage of monochrome graphic embroidery.
