TICKING DEPOT ~ FABRIC GUIDE

We have primarily fabric of two types depending on their origin.

RECOVERED PANELS

Ticking from old wool mattresses. In this case we have recovered panels of very different sizes, from 80x150 cm (and others even smaller) to 150x200 cm (and some even larger). Some panels have the typical patches or eyelets through which the ribbons that held the wool passed - others are continuous.

UNUSED YARDAGE

Remnants of an antique weaving mill or the hidden background of old stores that we discovered here and there. Ticking fabric sold by the meter on most cases. Of many of these, we have found full and partial bolts, so we can have larger quantities available in a continuous length. These precious, vintage fabrics retain their "fresh from the factory" look, and have different degrees of sizing (starch).

In the store you can see in each product listing the dimensions or lengths. In the recovered pieces it will state the size of the panel(s), in the unused pieces it will state whether they are sold by meter, or fixed length, depending on availability.

FAQ

Why different panels?

In the case of Spanish ticking, wool makers opened the covers to take advantage of the wool, and that process was not always symmetrical nor forgiving. Fortunately, for many years this preserved the fabrics that we can now enjoy, even if it is in panels of very different sizes.

Do all ticking fabrics have patches or eyelets?

Not all, but most of the recovered panels have patches or eyelets, a method used to make the tufting. Sometimes they have curious ribbons or patches on the back, something genuine from Spanish mattresses. Depending on the use that is going to be given to the panel, it may or may not be important. We note this in each listing, in case this is a consideration for you in either direction. Our unused yardage is preserved as it left the factory so it is continuous.

Do you have larger quantities of your ticking fabrics?

We have thousands of fabrics catalogued and many more in our back stock, that we continually recover and find. As a guide, the maximum for a single recovered panel is about 150x400 cm (59 x 157 in.). That said, we often find several panels of the same fabric and color, so it is possible to combine them to obtain larger quantities.

In the case of unused yardage, the amounts that we find vary, from 4-8 meter lengths up to 12-24 meter bolts. With a fabric width of about 100-110 cm to 150-160 cm.

AT YOUR SERVICE

FOR DESIGNERS AND COLLECTORS

If you want textiles to tell a story as well as being beautiful, this is your place. Our ticking fabrics are perfect for pillows, upholstery, curtains, headboards, or wall hangings. We are happy to communicate with you and explain anything you need to know. Our old fabrics are not easy, but we will help you select the most suitable textiles for your taste and project. We invite you to give us your size ranges, wishes, needs, or general themes. Please remember that we stock cushions made by us from these antique textiles.

FOR FILM & SET DESIGN

Our fabrics are not only old but they "look like it". We have a large number of complete mattress covers in stripes and damasks. We can help you build an early 1900s bedroom movie set. And if you need costumes to represent the 1700s or 1800s, please visit our collection of antique damask fabrics, or get in touch with your wishes or needs.
