

hey gorgeous!

We're so glad you've downloaded this Inspiration PDF. We're here to demystify how to craft the perfect wording for your stationery, and hope this helps you put together the wording of your dreams.

We've covered a range of styles and tones, from formal to casual and a few in-between, to give you a head start. And if you need a bit of advice or have any questions about anything wording-related for your stationery, don't hesitate to get in touch - just ping out with an email or call. We're always happy to chat!

the basics

DON'T FORGET TO INCLUDE THE MOST IMPORTANT DETAILS!

The very basic information that you need to include are the most obvious - so always make sure you've got the following included:

♥ Your names, exactly how you want them to be printed.

Do you want to use your full names, just your first names, or do you go by a nickname that everyone uses for you?

♥ Your engagement party date.

Depending on how formal you want your wording to be, it can be a full formal display of "Saturday the twenty fifth of October, two thousand and twenty five" right down to the ultra-modern "25.10.25".

♥ Venue names and addresses.

You'll want to include the street number, street name, suburb, city and state.

Generally you don't need to worry about including the postcode or country unless it's a destination party - particularly in countries such as Japan, Croatia, or the US, where the country and postcode inclusion is a must to ensure your guests head to the right spot!

♥ Event start and finish times.

Let people know when to arrive and when the night is over so you have your nearest and dearest there to celebrate with you on time!

♥ RSVP-by date

Always give your guests a deadline to RSVP by, just to take some of the stress off of your shoulders so you can make sure you know exactly who will be there and who to plan for.

Engagement RSVPs need a little less time than wedding RSVPs, so allow at least 4 weeks before your party as the RSVP-by date.

♥ Dress code, if you're having one.

Especially important if your venue has a strict code of dress for entry - you don't want guests to be denied access to your engagement party.
