At one time or another everyone has experienced the anxiety-inducing panic of discovering a rogue pimple.

But for some, those stubborn spots don't vanish at the end of their teenage years, instead transcending into adult acne and causing great distress, even depression.

Melbourne's leading Cosmetic Acupuncturist and Zilch founder, Dr Vivian Tam, understands the struggle having gone through years of chronic acne herself.

'I suffered from acne as a teenager and went through the typical pubescent frustrations with my skin,' she told FEMAIL (a customer's results)

'These skin issues bothered me all the way into my 20's with no luck in finding a real, long term solution to my pimply problems.'

After she started working as a Doctor of Chinese Medicine her skin began to clear, and it was her preoccupation with herbs that encouraged Dr Tam to share the healing methods with others.

'I launched my brand Zilch because I knew I had something that worked - a great product that was going to make a real difference in people's lives,' Dr Tam remarked.

'I was already busy at the clinic and only wanted to put my time into something I really believed in.

'I was seeing the most incredible results with my formula at the clinic (it was then dispensed in powder form on a patient prescription basis) and I knew I had to somehow make it available to consumers outside of the clinic.'

The product works by helping reduce inflammation, soreness, redness and uncomfortable swelling of larger cysts and nodules.

In Chinese Medicine an imbalance of heat in the body can cause skin breakouts. A perfect analogy is the Earth's core getting too hot, causing eruptions on the surface called volcanoes

'Blood circulation in Chinese Medicine is integral to the optimum wellbeing of one's health, and promoting healthy blood circulation for skin health is no exception,' she explained.

'When there is blood stagnation (blockages) in the body, swelling and inflammation and build-up of toxicity can occur. Zilch helps to prevent that.'

While there are a number of acne treatments on the market, Zilch is the first of its kind to utilise Chinese Herbal Medicine in this way.

'Most products on the market are external treatments targeted at managing it at a skin level; Zilch acne formula looks to heal the skin from the inside out,' Dr Tam commented

'It isn't formulated to be taken on an ongoing basis; people should be able to use a short course of this product to address the disharmonies and patterns in the body causing the acne.'

And most importantly, the $139 product works with a 90 per cent in-clinic success rate in reducing acne by 80 per cent within four weeks.

Customers should notice a reduction in acne within the first couple of weeks, with bigger changes made more obvious by week three and four.
