Child's Play®

INCLUSION & ACCESSIBILITY

Child's Play aims to reflect our diverse society and challenge stereotypes in everything we publish, and you'll find ethnically diverse characters in all our books. However, diversity and inclusion does not simply refer to heritage and culture, but also to disability, gender, gender identity, sexual preference, socio-economic status and age. Inclusive images are casual and incidental, meaning that all children can see themselves represented equally, rather than singled out for special attention. This leaflet highlights some of the diverse characters that you may be trying to find.

NEW Baby Rhyme Time

Illustrated by Annie Kubler & Sarah Dellow

These well-known songs feature a diverse group of toddlers! All four titles in the top row feature children who wear glasses. First Feelings

Illustrated by Paula Bowles

Children experience all kinds of feelings in a single day, but they can't always name them or talk about them easily. Developed in conjunction with a child psychologist and designed with both neurotypical and neurodiverse children in mind, this series focuses on the six major emotions experienced by very young children. The books use non-gendered characters to identify each emotion and illustrate appropriate coping strategies. The main character in When I Feel Happy wears glasses, while characters in both When I Feel Surprised and When I Feel Loved wear noise-cancelling ear protection.

Up and Down Mum

Illustrated by Summer Macon

For children who grow up in the care of a parent who has bipolar disorder, life can be filled with anxiety and uncertainty. With the aid of a clear and simple information spread, this story helps us to understand the causes of bipolar disorder and how we can learn to live with someone who has it. Developed in close consultation with families who have a parent with bipolar disorder, and created in collaboration with the Wellcome Trust.
