IGF-1 LR3 offers you the chance to make your physique and training goals a reality. This potent peptide delivers results, but it's only suitable for advanced researchers. Going overboard with the use of this peptide has consequences due to its efficacy and efficiency in building large amounts of muscle quickly. IGF-1 LR3 is a polypeptide long-chain amino acid peptide hormone. Insulin-like Growth Factor (IGF-1 Long-Arginine 3), an 83 amino acid analog of IGF-1, is a highly anabolic hormone released primarily in the liver with the stimulus of growth hormone (HGH).

IGF-1 Lr3 (Insulin-like Growth Factor-I Long R3) is an 83 amino acid analog of human IGF-I comprising the complete human IGF-I sequence with the substitution of an Arg for the Glu at position 3 (hence R3), as well as a 13 amino acid extension peptide at the N-terminus.

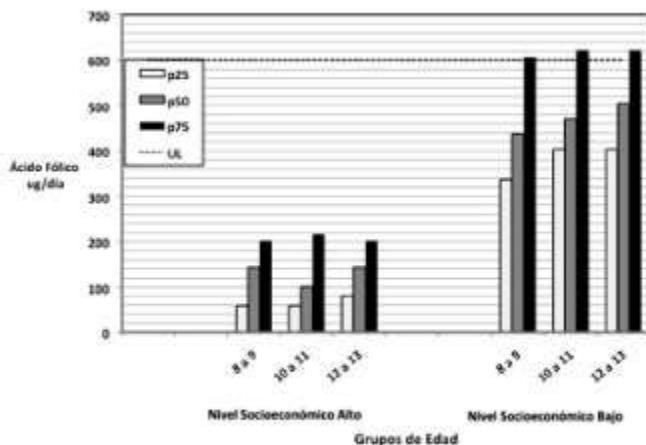

IGF-1 LR3 is an insulin growth factor and it is a human recombinant. It is also a single and non-glycosylated polypeptide chain. All in all, it contains over 83 amino acids and it has a molecular mass of way over 9200 Daltons as well. It is also a mediator when it comes to growth hormones as well. this

LR3 insulin-like growth factor-1 (IGF-I) is a recombinant analog of human IGF-I containing the complete human IGF-I protein sequence with substitution of Arg for Glu3 and a 13 amino acid N-terminal extension peptide. Insulin-like growth factor 1 (IGF-1), also known as somatomedin C, is a protein similar in structure to insulin.

IGF-1 LR3 used to cost so much in the past as it was hard to synthesis, as the Peptide market has significant in the process of making these peptides has become much easier and let's be honest most of these Peptides are produced in China same with HGH.
