ECZEMA AFTER CHICKEN POX

To whom it may concern,

At the end of February this year, my daughter 20 months old at the time got a mild case of chicken pox. It was completely cleared up within 10 to 12 days. About weeks later after the rashes had cleared up (Easter) she developed a skin rash it showed up with what my husband and I thought were flea bites or mozzie bites just 3 small pinhead blisters, this number doubled each day on that knee which I took a photo to ask a friend what she thought it was (photo below) and soon by a week it turned into a big dry itching blotch on her whole knee. I decided to take her to the doctor and he confirmed that it was in fact eczema. She prescribed an aqueous cream and steroid cream. However we did not want to use these on her so we did some research and found that turmeric oil helps so I made my own organic turmeric oil as I couldn't buy it anywhere and I mixed with the following essential oils: neem oil, lavender oil, tea-tree oil, patchouli oil, and sandalwood oil and i mixed it together with organic coconut oil and share butter and Weleda skin food (photo below). I used that cream and also Rhino Repair on the affected areas and I bought a cream called Aquaderm cream to put over the rest of her body and bathed her in colloidal oat bath soak. (photos below) I even got Artemis itch calm which she refused to take anyway.

This took away the itch and stopped the rash/blotch from spreading but it didn't seem to be clearing it up. More research we did made me think she had food allergies but my husband found a research study stating that the chicken pox virus can stay in the system and cause a viral autoimmune attack on the the skin. We ended up using the steroid cream once a day as it started to now spread up and down the leg and then starting the appear on the other leg too. My neighbour told me chickweed cream was good for eczema and also gave me contact info to a lady who did bio-resonance, so I ordered the chickweed cream as well as cell foods oxygen gel and booked in with Helen (bio resonance lady)

We went to see Helen on a Friday afternoon. She ran tests and did treatments and gave us a magnet disc that Malika was to wear for a month.

She concluded that Malika did indeed have the chicken pox virus in her system still and that she was allergic to dairy and was intolerant to soy and wheat, she told me to put Malika on fish oil and probiotics. So I went off to buy those and also new foods she could eat as well as allergy cookbooks and we also bought all new clothes for Malika we only use 1005 cotton, pure merino and bamboo now and allow nylon but no more synthetic wools or polyesters.

But the Monday 3 days after the treatment Malika was now covered in the rash feet, legs, arms, hands, back, and tummy. I told Helen and she said this was normal it was the treatment and the magnet chip pulling the virus out over her system, I then went on to find out oregano oil could help when I was researching it for something else so I mixed a couple of drops in the chickweed and I used this and the rhino repair only it seems to be helping I used for 2 days.

Then I thought of the Bioptron light I pulled it out with my books and started to use it I had a full bottle of the oxy water which Malika threw off the bed and it hit the draws when I went to use it again it exploded and went everywhere. So I used the light gel instead after using the light twice and the gel twice.

There was clearly a difference the rash wasn't flared up red and she stopped scratching. The next day after 2 more treatments with the light and using the gel, it had reduced. Each day it reduced more and more. By the third day I stopped Using everything else and just used the light and gel as I could see it was the only thing that showed the best result in healing her.
