TORONTO – Full-line furniture resource Sunpan has been recognized as an employer of choice after having been recently awarded the prestigious Great Place to Work Canada certification.

The company received the honor from the Great Place to Work Institute Canada, a research and management consultancy firm founded in the U.S. in 1980. It has international affiliate offices around the world and in the U.S. and produces the research for Fortune’s “100 Best Companies to Work For List.

In Canada, the list of top employers is distributed each spring by the Toronto-based Globe and Mail newspaper.

Companies are evaluated based on feedback from employees, which helps determine the type of culture within the organization as well as the level of trust between employees and management.

“Our company has an unconditional commitment to creating memorable and positive workplace experiences,” Sunpan said in the announcement of the award on its LinkedIn page . “This recognition is a testament to our actions, and we cannot thank our employees enough for their participation in making this award possible.”
