California Assembly Bill No. 1200 (AB 1200) Cookware Disclosure

The cookware disclosure requirement of California AB 1200 is found in the California Health & Safety Code beginning in Section 109010. Manufacturers of cookware containing one or more intentionally added chemicals from a designated list are required to disclose those chemicals. The law applies to California only. The tables below identify the cookware for which the disclosure is required.

Anova has no reason to believe that any of its products present a health risk. The cookware products identified here comply with relevant limits and rules established by the federal Food and Drug Administration, including the relevant requirements of Title 21 of the Code of Federal Regulations governing the safe use of product parts in direct contact with food.
