

Case Study

Client: Stylex

Case Goods

Stylex is a family-owned American design brand focusing on commercial furniture. At Stylex, the team is committed to making things better by making better things. They create enduring products that respond to the ways people live and work, design solutions for intentional and joyful living, and support dynamic and social environments that will not only make their customers' lives better, but the world a better place.

Opportunity

- Protect custom laminate and wood veneer case goods in transit
- Implement sustainable material
- Protect product ranging from 20-100lbs shipped LTL

Solution

The Mushroom Packaging team designed parts to protect Stylex's Free Address line of case goods during shipment. The customer's goals were to prioritize the corner's protection of the case goods, to minimize packing time for their production team, and to make unpacking easy for the furniture installation staff. The result was an efficient universal corner piece, creating an efficient and eco-friendly solution for packaging. These parts have been in use by the company since 2019.
