Celebrating 100th Robotic Joint Surgery

with RoboDoc, Mr Nadim Aslam

Consultant Orthopaedic Robotic Hip & Knee SMART Surgeon Mr Nadim Aslam, has recently performed a personal milestone of his 100th Mako robotic-assisted joint replacement after carrying out a total knee replacement operation on Mrs Hilary Fowler.

Mrs Fowler was confident in selecting RoboDoc, Mr Nadim Aslam for her procedure, saying: "I had previously undergone a successful operation by Mr Aslam many years ago, so I had no hesitation in entrusting him with my robotic knee replacement. Several of my friends have been his patients before, making it an obvious choice. He is truly a remarkable man! Being his 100th robotic patient was an exciting experience."

A 3D CT scan was performed, creating an exact virtual model of Hilary's unique anatomy, enabling us to plan and tailor the surgical procedure to achieve an accurate and perfect fit for the joint replacement.

This incredibly high level of detail improves the fitting of hip and total knee implants which therefore leads to better joint functionality and reduced post-operative pain. Compared to traditional surgery, robot-assisted surgery has been proven to significantly reduce pain after surgery, allow a faster recovery in early knee movement, and perform joint replacement surgery with more accuracy.

RoboDoc, Mr Nadim Aslam, who has pioneered the introduction of the Mako system at Spire South Bank Hospital said: "This has been an incredible journey, from our very first procedure in January to now, marking my 100th procedure in just seven months. The feedback from patients has been nothing short of astounding. Patients have reported exceptional outcomes, remarkably faster return to work or being able to do the things they love and unmatched levels of satisfaction."

The expertise of Mr Nadim Aslam, combined with the advancements offered by the robotic assisted arm, have significantly had positive outcomes.

Mr Aslam has now carried out over 150 robotic-arm assisted joint replacement surgeries and is in the top 10 Robotic Surgeon users in the Country.

WISE INVESTMENT

THE IMPORTANCE OF PROTECTION PLANS

There are so many different insurance policies on the market these days, whether it's for your own use or your business.

We do not know what might happen to us or loved ones tomorrow. A protection plan is a type of insurance that provides financial security in case of unexpected events such as illness, accident, or death. Unsurprisingly, businesses and self-employed individuals have access to a unique insurance policy that protects their most valuable assets, themselves or their employees.

Here are some protection plans you may want to consider:

Life Cover

Life insurance is a type of policy that pays out a lump sum to your beneficiaries or estate when you die. The money might be used to pay off debts, like a mortgage, or invested to produce an income so your family can maintain their standard of living. The amount paid out by an insurance provider is determined by the level of cover you choose when you take out the policy.

The most common type of life insurance is called a "Term Assurance" policy because you take it over a set term – perhaps through to the end of your mortgage or through to your expected retirement age.

Instead of a lump sum, you could consider a policy that would pay a regular monthly income to your family, for a fixed term. This policy is called a "Family Income Benefit".

Should the insured person live past the agreed term of either of these two types of policy, the plan simply stops, and you receive no payment. However, premiums can be surprisingly affordable for most people.

Alternatively, a "Whole of Life" insurance policy provides cover for the entire duration of your life, rather than a set period. They are often used for Inheritance Tax (IHT) planning, paying an amount into Trust to pay the bill. However, as the insurance company knows they will have to pay out, so long as premiums are maintained throughout your life, it is a more expensive option, particularly if you opt for a set guaranteed premium.

Alternatively, premiums can be set relatively low for an initial period after which they would be reviewed periodically and are likely to rise significantly as the insured person gets older. An investment element can also be incorporated, so that the policy can build up a value over time to help with future premium increases. However, if the investment does not grow as much as you expected, you may still end up paying more in premiums to cover the shortfall.

Private Medical Insurance (PMI)

We are lucky to have the National Health Service (NHS) in the UK, which provides free medical treatment to all residents. While the NHS provides excellent healthcare services, some people may choose to opt for PMI to access faster treatment, more personalised care, or treatments not available on the NHS.

PMI can provide additional benefits such as private hospitals, shorter waiting times, and more choice of doctors and treatments. However, it's important to note that PMI can be expensive, and not everyone will be eligible for cover. The NHS remains an essential service that provides healthcare to millions of people in the UK, regardless of their ability to pay.

Critical Illness

Serious illnesses can have a severe impact on your finances as you may need to take time off work for your treatment and recovery. In certain cases, it may be beneficial to pay for private treatment, to speed up the process or receive alternative therapies otherwise unavailable through the NHS.

Critical illness cover is a type of insurance policy that pays out a lump sum if you are diagnosed with a critical illness that is covered by the policy, during a fixed term. The cover can be purchased as a standalone policy or as an add-on to a life insurance policy.

The illnesses covered by critical illness cover can vary depending on the policy, but typically include conditions such as cancer, heart attack, stroke, and multiple sclerosis. If you are diagnosed with a covered illness, the policy will pay out a lump sum of money that can be used to cover medical expenses, pay bills, or make necessary lifestyle changes.

Income Protection

Income Protection insurance is designed to provide you with a regular income if you're unable to work due to illness or injury. It's an essential policy for anyone who relies on their income to pay bills and support their family.

The payments start after an initial deferred period of your choice. If you are able to return to work prior to the end of this deferred period, no payment is made. Otherwise it will usually pay until your return to work, retirement, or earlier death. There are also policies that pay out for a shorter set term (e.g. five years) and these are less expensive.

The term of the contract can usually be to age 70, and there is no limit to the number of claims that can be made while the policy is in force.

You should note that these policies are designed to replace some of the lost income caused by accident or sickness - the level of benefit that you choose can be reduced if there is no loss of income e.g. through state benefits, employer benefits and other insurance policies.

Business Protection

Embarking on the journey of self-employment or running a small business is both exciting and challenging. As a self-employed individual or small business owner, you or your key employees are the driving force behind your enterprises' success.

Therefore, it is crucial to recognise the significance of protecting yourself, certain employees and the business against unforeseen circumstances that could potentially threaten its continuity. Business Protection Insurance provides a safety net for your company if a key individual, shareholder or partner dies.

There are three main types of cover:

- Key person insurance provides financial protection to a company in the event of the death or critical illness of a key employee. This employee is typically vital to the success and smooth operation of the business, and their absence could cause financial hardship. The policy pays out a predetermined sum of money to the company, which can be used to cover expenses, recruit and train a replacement, or help stabilise the business during a difficult period.
- Shareholder protection, on the other hand, is a policy that ensures the smooth transfer of business ownership in the event of a shareholder's death or critical illness. It aims to protect the interests of the remaining shareholders by providing funds to buy the affected shareholder's shares, allowing for a seamless transition of ownership and preventing potential disputes or financial strain on the company.
- Lastly, business loan protection is a policy that safeguards a business against the risk of being unable to repay a loan due to the death or critical illness of a key individual responsible for loan repayments. This insurance ensures that the outstanding loan amount is paid off, relieving the burden on the business and allowing it to continue its operations without financial strain.

Summary

In conclusion, a protection plan is an essential investment that can provide financial security and give you peace of mind, knowing that you and your family are financially secure in case of unexpected events.

We can help devise a protection plan to suit all budgets - something is better than nothing. In general the younger and healthier you are when you apply, the cheaper it will be to arrange, and you can then fix the premium for the long term. Premiums for policies such as Critical Illness or Income Protection will naturally be higher as you are significantly more likely to claim for health than death.

Having a pre-existing condition does not mean that providers will not cover the insured but will more than likely increase the premium and may have more extensive exclusions than for those people who do not have a history of medical issues.

Whether you're an individual, a family, or a business owner, you need to have a protection plan in place to safeguard your financial future. So, don't put it off any longer, get a protection plan today and secure your future.

It is also important to review your protection cover periodically, to check that it is competitive, sufficient, and appropriate for your changing circumstances.

If you would like to discuss your existing or potential protection needs, one of our experienced Financial Planners is on hand for a no obligation initial consultation.
