

CALL FOR PAPERS

Fontes Historiae Siciliae I (2024)

The FHS series brings together research from various historical disciplines. The focus is on the analysis and interpretation of the material findings, in connection to their role in reconstructing the ancient and medieval history of Sicily. Research contributions acknowledge the material findings, including numismatic, architectural, ceramic, and epigraphic findings, in their function as a data basis in the process of historical knowledge acquisition; thus, the archaeological source assumes a function that goes beyond merely verifying the statements from the historical literature. With this basic understanding, FHS also offers a platform for methodological exchange in the historical research.

The major focus of the upcoming edition is on the topic of land-based long-distance transport in the pre-modern era. (Other relevant research papers that meet the basic purpose of FHS as described above, are welcome.) The upcoming edition will be published in October 2024, and proposals for research contributions can be sent from now on. The final submission of the papers must be made latest by 15.03.2024. Research papers can be submitted in the following languages: German, English, Italian, Spanish, French, Portuguese, Romanian.

When creating the citation apparatus, care must be taken to ensure that literature is given in footnotes by short citation (author, year, page number) and that a bibliography is added at the end of the article, in which the short citations are broken down by means of a detailed bibliographical reference. With regard to the further design of quotations and references, the scientific practices of the respective language area can be taken into account.
