Welcome to
Running the Goat, Books & Broadsides,
2024 catalogue

We're excited to share our beautiful and engaging publications for 2024—five delightful picture books that range from the Southern Shore of Newfoundland to the heart of Labrador, and beyond. We are publishing two new creators—BONNIE JOHNSTONE and ANNIE PICARD—as well as ELIZABETH JANCEWICZ, an illustrator new to us. Our dear friends and colleagues LORI DOODY, BILL PECHET, BILL RICHARDSON, and VESELINA TOMOVA are back as well.

We've a wonderful tale of a pig very much in need of relief—a story set in Witless Bay, a lovely community in our own neighbourhood; a wild romp around the world for a beloved and bedraggled stuffed toy; a story of a surprising and talented new pet; and one about a resourceful woman and the unexpected power of vegetables. We're especially delighted to be collaborating again with Mamu Tshishkutamashutau Innu Education to co-publish a gorgeous re-telling of an Innu creation myth, in both English and Innu-aimun. This book will be available in two editions, each with a different dialect of Innu-aimun.

The books on our 2024 list celebrate community, friendship, resilience, bravery, and kindness. They'll leave you thinking and laughing and, quite possibly, singing. We hope that you love them as much as we have loved working to bring them to you.

Read on, and enjoy!

THE PIG & THE DUMPLING A TALE OF WITLESS BAY

Written by BONNIE JOHNSTONE
Illustrated by VESELINA TOMOVA

ISBN: 9781998802081
Trade paperback /9.5 x 7
40 pages
List Price: $13.99
Ages: 4 to 8
Pub date: March 19, 2024

Ignatius is a pig with a big appetite and very little patience. When someone tosses a fresh dumpling his way, he grabs it in mid-air and swallows. That dumpling is big and it is hot, and very quickly it is stuck—right in Ignatius’s throat!

Desperate for relief, the poor pig races through his little community to reach the cooling water of the ocean. And careening on his way to the sea, he has plenty of near misses, and a few collisions, with local village folk. How much trouble can one pig cause?

A playful story with a “you-can’t-catch-me” spirit that celebrates small rural communities, simple living, and silly pigs.

A former teacher and a craftsperson, BONNIE JOHNSTONE is originally from Quebec and now makes her home in Witless Bay, NL, the seaside community in this story. She lives with her husband on a small farm, where they have gardens and two sheep, but no pigs. The Pig and the Dumpling is loosely inspired by an anecdote Bonnie discovered when researching Bygone Days of Witless Bay, an award-winning community history which she compiled with Maureen Walsh, on behalf of the Witless Bay Heritage Committee. It is her first children’s book.

Born in Sofia, Bulgaria, VESELINA TOMOVA graduated from Leipzig’s School of Graphic Art and Book Design before moving to Newfoundland and Labrador. A graphic designer and award-winning artist, she has illustrated several books for Running the Goat, including PB’s Comet, Daphne’s Bees, and The Wall & the Wind, which she also wrote. Veselina divides her time between St. John’s, Newfoundland, where she lives in a small house overlooking the harbour, and Rusalya, Bulgaria, a village chockful of memorable characters, where she tends her family’s huge vegetable garden and enjoys the antics of Bucky the dog and Ginger the cat.

Variations of the story of how the world came to be on the turtle's back can be found in Indigenous cultures throughout North America/Turtle Island. This moving version of the tale—a story of resilience, sacrifice, and friendship—is one that Annie Picard was often told as a child by her maternal grandmother while they lived in nutshimit (on the land) in the Labrador/Quebec peninsula.

Picard's lovely re-telling of this traditional Innu story is brought vividly to life by Elizabeth Jancewicz's stunning illustrations.

ANNIE PICARD is an Innu woman born in Sept Îles, Québec, in 1977; in 1980, after some very hard circumstances, she moved to Sheshatshiu, with her mother and younger brother. Upon her arrival there, she quickly went into the care of her maternal grandparents, where she learned to speak her mother tongue—Innu-aimun—and was taught about the very rich culture of her Innu background. She lived six months out of the year in nutshimit in the Innu homeland Nitassinan. One of her best memories of that time is when her grandparents used to tell her the legends of her people every night before bed.

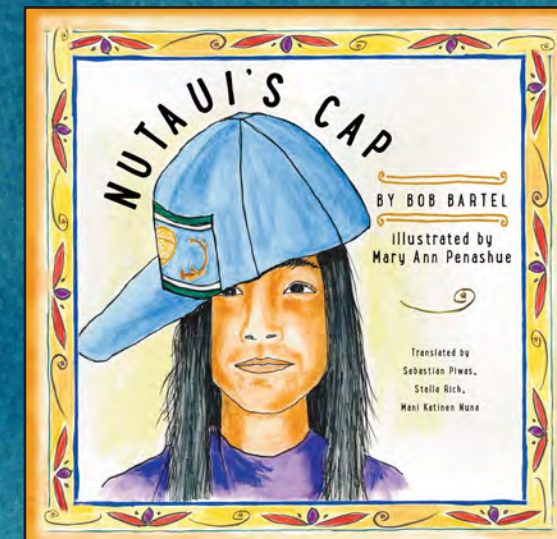

ELIZABETH JANCEWICZ grew up in Kawawachikamach and Schefferville, Quebec, and draws much of her inspiration from the flora and fauna of that area. After leaving to attend art school in New York, she retains close ties to her childhood by continuing to illustrate books and curriculum for First Nations communities in northern Quebec, Ontario, and Labrador.

KEY SELLING POINTS:

-  This touching tale of sacrifice and resilience adds to a growing body of literature that connects children to the richness of Indigenous cultures.
-  The book features gorgeous illustrations that enliven the story.
-  Presented in both English and Innu-aimun, the tale promotes literacy in, and honours, Innu-aimun, and introduces English speakers to the language.
-  The English version includes all animal names in Innu-aimun; a simple glossary at the end of the book gives translations of the animal names.
-  A detailed glossary for the entire Innu-aimun text will be available for download from Running the Goat's website.
-  An audio version in Innu-aimun will be available on the Mamu Tshishkutamashutau Innu Education website.
