Cask conditioned beer requires special care and attention. The beer in the bag will come complete with a yeast sediment that will have become mixed into the beer during transit. Once delivered, the beer will need to be kept at a cool temperature (ideally 12°C or less) and needs to be kept still and undisturbed for 12-24 hours to allow for the sediment to drop out of suspension. This will help keep the beer as fresh as possible. You may find that the first half pint poured might be cloudy, but a good level of clarity in the beer should follow thereafter.

Consume within 3-4 days of the first pour.

Cheers!
