

THE #BETTERLETTERSIN15 CHALLENGE

WEEK 1 | DAY 4 | CONNECTIONS

PRACTICE MAKES PROGRESS

Today we will be practicing connection these letters together: t-i-c-e
Here are 2 examples (one without bounce and one with bounce) based on the letter variations previously provided:

WITHOUT BOUNCE

The word "tice" is written in a cursive script. The letters are black, and the exit strokes are highlighted in blue. The word is written without a bounce, meaning the letters are connected smoothly without any upward or downward curves between them.

WITH BOUNCE

The word "tice" is written in a cursive script. The letters are black, and the exit strokes are highlighted in blue. The word is written with a bounce, meaning the letters are connected with a slight upward and downward curve between them.

When creating words, I like to think about it as each individual letter being put next to another. Make sure the exit stroke (blue lines) on each letter is long enough for the next letter to be connected to it.

On the next page, trace the grey letters then practice the connection on your own in the space provided. You don't have to do both--pick one variation to focus on. If you run out of space, there is an extra blank sheet with guidelines for you to print out and use.

tice tice

