GROUND
CERAMICS

ABOUT GROUNDED CERAMICS

I thoughtfully create all of my ceramic pieces in the garage studio of my Oak Park, Illinois home, just outside the city of Chicago. It's a small space that allows me to carefully craft small batches of unique, one of a kind pieces. I have always enjoyed using my hands to make things and am especially fascinated with texture. I hand build or throw on the wheel each and every piece using porcelain or stoneware clay.

The name grounded ceramics is relevant in numerous aspects of my clay practice. From clay being sourced underground to the serene balance found at the center of the potter's wheel, feeling grounded remains central to my practice. I hope to translate this idea into my pieces by providing an opportunity for pause while bringing a dose of beauty, peace and permanence into your life.

THE JEWELRY PROCESS

Each piece of porcelain jewelry starts out as a large lump of clay. I roll the clay into thin slabs, cut out and form each piece by hand. Each piece is delicately sponged, sanded and smoothed. Once it is air dry it is bisque fired in an electric kiln to a temperature of 1950 degrees Fahrenheit for a total of about 10 hours. Once it cools, each piece is hand painted with underglaze and/or glaze then fired a second time to higher temperature of 2200 degrees for another 10 plus hours. Once the piece is ready, I hand-make each finding using 14K gold-filled wire. The result is a piece that is as unique and beautiful as its wearer.

In addition to being a clay artist and small business owner, I'm a museum educator at the Art Institute of Chicago. I live in Oak Park with my husband and two children, Elyse (8) and Theo (4).

Thank you so much for your interest in my work and for reading my story.
