Cotswold Lavender was founded by Charlie Byrd in 1999 on the third generation family farm in the heart of the Cotswold Hills. As well as many acres of lavender we also grow wheat, barley and other crops. Initially named after the local village, Snowshill, the brand relaunched as Cotswold Lavender in 2009. Since then the range has grown and flourished and is now sold around the world.

Our products are made using both the English Lavender and Lavandin Essential Oils which are grown, harvested and distilled here on the farm. We currently grow about 70 acres of lavender and visitors are welcome to come and visit during the summer (check the website for opening dates and details).

We farm in harmony with our environment using low input methods; we plant wild flowers and hedgerows to support mammals, birds and our pollinators such as bees and butterflies.
