A New York couple who saw their cupcake empire soar to a $66 million business before going bust say there's never been a moment of regret selling the business — and wouldn't write off doing it again

It was a sharp reversal for the New York-based cupcake shop that started in 2003 with a single store in Manhattan's Upper West Side but went on to spawn a Y2K fad that spread around the globe.

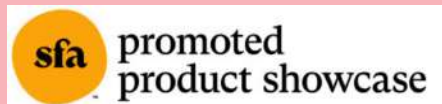

The chain offered over 75 flavors of cupcakes with unique toppings — such as a Girls Scouts Thin Mints option.

Crumbs Bake Shop, once valued at $66 million, bought back by founders for $300

Crumbs Bake Shop — a cupcake empire valued at $66 million when it went public more than a decade ago — was quietly bought back by its founders for $300, The Post has learned.

The Big Apple bakery — credited with igniting a cupcake craze in the early 2000s — had built a chain of 79 stores across eight states, only to be left for dead in a 2014 bankruptcy despite a major growth push by high-profile retail executives.

Last year, co-founders Jason and Mia Bauer, who started Crumbs in 2003 with a single shop on Manhattan's Upper West Side at West 75th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, retook control for $300 — that is, the fee that's required to purchase an abandoned brand from the US Patent and Trademark Office.

FACTS

Here's What Happened To The Massively Trendy Crumbs Cupcakes

Crumbs Bakeshop initially emerged on the scene in 2003, founded by Mia and Jason Bauer. The first store opened on New York City's Upper West Side specializing in handcrafted cupcakes with a variety of flavors. The bake shop rode a wave of popularity in the 2000s during which eating gourmet cupcakes suddenly became all the rage. One of the sparks that ignited this particular dessert trend was an episode of "Sex and the City" that shows Sarah Jessica Parker's character Carrie Bradshaw noshing on a cupcake from Magnolia Bakery in NYC's West Side.

6. The Original Crumbs Bakeshop

You may remember Crumbs from its glory days when it was on seemingly every street corner hawking oversize cupcakes with gritty frosting and in dubious flavors like a shockingly dry take on a Hostess cupcake. The company went dark in 2014 but has recently been revived by its original owners. Their new business strategy: delivery (and a few select grocery store aisles). Cupcakes are still the star, but Crumbs has jumped on the delivery cookie bandwagon as well, offering small, five-inch-tall cookie jars filled with mini cookies in flavors like Chocolate Chip and Cotton Candy that you can pluck and enjoy immediately.

A New York couple who saw their cupcake empire soar to a $66 million business in 2011 before going bust paid $350 to revive the brand

A beloved New York-based cupcake empire that went bust nine years ago is looking to make a comeback.

Crumbs Bake Shop, a hugely popular cupcake store founded in 2003, has been revived by founders Jason and Mia Bauer. They bought back the brand last year — seven years after it filed for bankruptcy, the New York Post reported on May 2.

According to a filing from the US Patent and Trademark Office, Jason Bauer had applied to take over the "Original Crumbs Bakeshop" brand back in February 2021. The application cost $350.

The turnaround is another chapter in Crumbs' dramatic story which started in 2003 with a single shop in Manhattan's Upper West Side.

Crumbs Bakeshop Announces Relaunch With Nationwide Delivery

Nearly 20 years ago, the world was infatuated with cupcakes and those who were diehards knew CRUMBS Bakeshop was the OG cupcake spot. Founded by husband-and-wife duo, Mia and Jason Bauer, in 2003, CRUMBS grew quickly to having 50 stores nationwide before being sold in 2012. Sadly by 2016 all of the CRUMBS stores had closed and the brand was no more—until the need for nostalgia hit in the pandemic and the Bauers found themselves on a soul searching adventure that led to the decision to bring back CRUMBS. That's right, cupcake lovers, starting today CRUMBS is back and better than ever.

A lot has changed in the last 20 years, and the Bauers are committed to making CRUMBS 2.0 an experience that's evolved with its customers. Rather than finding a new brick and mortar home, CRUMBS cupcakes—and their new cookie jar line—will be available via nationwide shipping through the company's website, with same day delivery available where the CRUMBS story began in NYC through UberEats, GrubHub, DoorDash, Seamless, and Postmates. Plus the high-quality baked goods will be available in select grocery stores including ShopRite, Fairway, and Westside Market NYC before the end of the year.

Drum up support

DEF Leppard drummer Stick Allen didn't want to live after losing his arm in a 1986 accident. "I really didn't want to be here and I felt very defeated," Allen, 51, exclusively told The Post's Nicki Goslin, adding he felt "awkward" and "self-conscious." In 1998, the then-29-year-old lost his left arm after an auto accident in England, Allen, who had been trying to pass another car at high speed, lost control of his Corvette and was thrown through the sunroof. His arm stayed with the car. The English-born rocker — who's touring with his wife Lauren Monroe — managed to rebuild his life and career using a specially designed electronic drum kit. The couple are also the founders of the Koven Drum Foundation, which helps veterans dealing with PTSD. "The first thing any of us ever learn is our mother's heartbeat, so we're electronic beings. It's just a very ancient form. It immediately taps into healing," Allen said.

VENTURE capitalist heavyweights Alan Patrickoff, 88, was the oldest NYC Marathon runner this year out of 42,000 participants, and the financier raised more than half a million for Alzheimer's charity Caring Kind with his epic achievement. The entrepreneur, an entrepreneur who said he's "determined to live to be 104," crossed the finish line in just over 8 hours and 50 minutes, wearing a shirt that proudly proclaimed his age. "I feel a great sense of satisfaction that I set out to complete the marathon," Patrickoff told Page Six. "Even more importantly, I wanted to finish to be somewhat of a role model for older people. ... to know if they set out to accomplish something and try hard enough, they can achieve anything. The Original Crumbs is launching a comeback under the guidance of the company's original owners. Mia and Jason Bauer, original founders of Crumbs Bakeshop, are back to relaunch the iconic brand that pioneered the gourmet cupcake nearly 20 years ago in 2003, and later helped spawn the cupcake craze that spread across the globe.

But a rapid growth plan under different management as a publicly traded company turned sour for Crumbs Bakeshop, which in 2014 announced that it was closing its nearly 50 remaining stores nationwide, according to published reports. Crumbs Bakeshop, which opened its first location in 2003, had grown to dozens of stores, and analysts remarked that the speed of growth proved too much to handle profitably.

CRUMBS Bakeshop is back and with new products

CRUMBS Bakeshop was part of the huge cupcake craze in the early 2000s but they have been gone for the past 10 years. Well, they are back and with their return, they are offering some new products as well. Now the brand has cookies too!

For the comeback, CRUMBS is bringing back old favorites like the Squiggle, Vanilla, Raspberry Swirl, Red Velvet, and Cookies and Creme cupcakes. They will eventually be available at most local grocery stores by the end of the year but will start at locations in the New York area.

But beyond the cupcakes, the brand is also debuting CRUMBS cookies as well. When are cookies ever a bad idea? The cookies come in a bunch of delicious flavors including Marshmallow Cookies and Cream, Red Velvet, Oatmeal Raisin, Cotton Candy, Chocolate Chip (have to have the classics), Chocolate Cherry, Chocolate Candy, Psychedelic Sugar, and Sprinkle Sundae.

The brand originally closed its doors after changing hands from the husband-and-wife founders, but CRUMBS Bakeshop is not only back, it's back with those original owners, Jason and Mia Bauer. And besides the addition of cookies, they are also adding one important change. They are offering same-day delivery!

Treat yourself for any occasion with CRUMBS mouth-watering cupcakes that are 2x larger than the typical size. After a 10-year hiatus, they are back and better than ever because they offer cookies too! All their products are kosher & they even offer a subscription model for convenience.

The cupcakes are big enough to split, but why would you? You won't want to give up a single crumb of these CRUMBS Bakeshop cupcakes and cookies. Remember that half-eaten box of chocolates I got? I may have gotten him back, but I'm not that mean. I saved one for him too.

Crumbs Cupcakes, Once a $66 Million Empire, Was Revived for Merely $300

bon appétit | DELICIOUS OR DISTRESSING

ba bonappetitmag • Follow ...

ba bonappetitmag • We're not leaving any crumbs on the table. The formerly popular cupcake 🧁 chain went from a $66 million empire to a bankrupt, abandoned brand. The founders and former owners have now repurchased the shop for a mere $300, no more zeros. And they have plans to resurrect its massive cupcakes online and in grocery stores. For those who remember these baked goods, how Delicious 👍 or Distressing 🙄 would you rank Crumbs? Find this and other highly contentious food-related internet culture at the link in bio. 📷 Photo Courtesy of Crumbs
