Autumn symphony

ALL THE COLORS OF AUTUMN

In Limoges porcelain from the Italian brand Marie Daage, the primary shades of the autumn palette are united: this dinnerware set immediately conjures associations with a multi-colored carpet of rustling leaves underfoot. Petal-like patterned ornaments attract the eye with delicate nuances, seemingly crafted by the stroke of a painter's brush. A subtle golden edge lining the plate borders resonates with the sleek finishes of the Pintinox cutlery. The visual highlights of this colorful table setting are crystal vases adorned with bouquets of dahlias and other autumnal flowers, harmonizing with the tableware's color scheme. Such vivid décor necessitates no additional embellishments— a monochromatic pastel-toned tablecloth serves as a splendid backdrop for the primary items. To impart a more airy composition, the refined Klimchi glasses with a soft pink tint create a sense of effortless lightness through their varying heights and shapes, a crucial essence to uphold as the colder season draws near.

TEXTURE PLAY

Creating an autumnal ambiance for lunch or dinner can be achieved by using just two warm shades: honey orange and muted light green in this table setting. A broad linen runner with patterned edges serves as both a base and an accent, also allowing the amber depth of the Gusevsky Crystal Factory's glasses and bowls to be fully revealed. Balancing the arrangement is Narumi's tea service made of pristine bone china. The plates are adorned with a gradient pattern: their edges seem to shimmer with a golden-greenish light, harmonizing with the shade of the napkins that feature lace inserts. To add an elevated look to the composition, minimalist tableware is complemented by a textured engraved crystal jug, ornate sugar bowl, dish, and jam pot with silver plating. These elements, along with the cutlery featuring intricate spiral handles, subtly hint at the elaborate aesthetics of the Rococo era.

ACCENTS IN LILAC TONES

Ripe figs, clusters of dark grapes, late dahlias in rich plum shades—expressive purple can also allude to the gifts of autumn. It looks particularly striking against white: hence, this combination is purposefully used in the porcelain set from Legle and linen table napkins from Moltomolto. To prevent these elements from blending into one, the table setting is complemented by plates with a black-and-white «houndstooth» print. Traditional table arrangement looks fresh and original thanks to the use of intricate shapes and textures. For instance, a Bohemian glass bowl from Klimchi acts as a vase, adorned with numerous convex elements. Unusual stainless-steel candleholders are inspired by Japanese cherry blossom petals, while an elegant salt shaker with ridges resembles a seashell. Adding a touch of bohemian elegance to the setting are delicate crystal goblets and glasses with graphic reliefs, as well as small bowls for nuts combining golden and silvery finishes.
