	LiquaCel	PUSH Collagen Dipeptide Concentrate
Type of Collagen	Collagen peptide	Collagen Dipeptide
How it's Broken Down	The longer and less stable molecular chains can make it more challenging for standard collagen to make it into the bloodstream. Absorption may be less than a dipeptide version. This proprietary blend contains hydrolyzed collagen (80%) and whey isolate (20%) also contains 2.5 g of arginine, which promotes wound healing (by increasing circulation to cells).	Dipeptides are very stable and have a high absorption rate into the bloodstream. A dipeptide-rich collagen is shown to be more efficient than standard collagen at stimulating wound healing.
Source of Collagen	Extracted from the skin of bovine (pigs) and then goes through an enzymatic process with leaves no pork DNA remaining. It is Kosher approved.	Extracted from pork. Extraction process does leave some pork DNA.
Benefits	High in protein, promotes wound healing, increased skin moisture, elasticity, texture, reduces wrinkle formation. *Other benefits may include those included in dipeptide version. Bariatric surgery benefits: more protein (combination of collagen and whey proteins).	Promotes wound healing, increases skin moisture, elasticity & texture, reduces wrinkle formation, encourages healthy bone metabolism (and bone density), reduces joint pain, reduces bruising, helps after radiation treatments. Bariatric surgery benefits: more highly absorbed (higher benefits for wound healing).
