Surya Brasil's body lotion is 98.88% natural, so you won't find any ingredients like parabens, sulfates, phthalates, GMOs, BHT, EDTA, mineral oil, ethyl alcohol, silicone or synthetic fragrance in the product. I'm already impressed by the company's dedication to bringing an all-natural moisturizer to the market. Product: Surya Brasil Sapien Women Body Moisturizer Price: $26 We Think:

How It Looks, How It Feels: The moisturizer is incredibly light, absorbs immediately and isn't greasy. It has a silky consistency that runs a bit but isn't too thick. How To Use It: Use generously, concentrating on dry areas of the body like the elbows and knees. It's always best to apply any moisturizer after a warm shower for the best absorption. Results: I regularly used Surya Body moisturizer immediately after a shower and within a few days, my skin was noticeably more supple and hydrated. It was also gentle enough to use on my face, and I didn't break out. With ingredients right out of the Amazon (that are ridiculously hard to pronounce) like cupuaçu and murumuru butters, pracaxi and açai oils, amaranth protein, and many others, it is no surprise that this exotic, all-natural moisturizer is a keeper. Though I have used products that weren't necessarily natural, yet moisturized very effectively (and were cheaper), I prefer paying the extra few dollars to a company that is dedicated to sustainability. Surya Brasil won me over. Disclaimer: I received Surya Brasil Sapien Women Body Moisturizer as a sample.
