

EXHIBIT WITH PLUME

ABOUT US

More than a decade ago, the seeds of Katrina McKeon's creativity were sown within the walls of Plume Gallery. What began as a modest storefront gallery in Williamstown has since flourished into a multi-faceted artistic hub, now proudly encompassing two distinctive locations: Armadale and South Melbourne. Nestled within the bustling metro Melbourne, each gallery exudes its unique ambience, with South Melbourne doubling as the personal studio space for gallery Director Katrina McKeon.

At the heart of Plume Gallery's identity are its three esteemed resident artists: Katrina McKeon herself, Kendra Sloan, and Raymond Walter Penangke. Moreover, Plume Gallery serves as a sanctuary for a thoughtfully curated collection of Aboriginal Artworks, showcasing the talents of both established and emerging indigenous artists.

WHAT MAKES US UNIQUE

Plume Gallery, housed in a renovated warehouse, blends industrial charm with contemporary allure, offering a captivating exhibition space. Bathed in natural and gallery lighting, the expansive white walls complement a striking black display wall, creating an ambience of artistic sophistication. With 4-meter-high ceilings enhancing spaciousness, the gallery provides a versatile canvas for artists and creatives, fostering opportunities for expression and collaboration.

Equipped with essential onsite amenities including a bathroom, kitchen, and ample storage, along with modern conveniences like WIFI, heating, cooling, and speakers, Plume Gallery caters to diverse needs. Conveniently located near Melbourne's CBD, public transport, and attractions, it is a hub of creativity in the vibrant cityscape.
