The figure consists of three rows of binary images. The top row shows a grayscale brain scan with a black diagonal band representing the ventricles. Overlaid are two binary masks: one for white matter (WM), which is black in the ventricles and white elsewhere, and one for gray matter (GM), which is white in the ventricles and black elsewhere. The middle row shows the WM and GM regions extracted from the original image. The bottom row shows the final segmentation results, where the WM and GM regions are highlighted in black against a white background.
