

Strike Partners with Samsung to Deliver Enterprise Mobility Solution for Public Safety Sector

Brisbane, June 25, 2018 - Samsung DeX is recreating the in-vehicle computer for public safety officers, a practical solution to replace old laptops and desktop computers making the workflow more efficient and safer.

Samsung DeX gives you what you want from a desktop experience. By connecting a Samsung Galaxy S8, S8+, S9, S9+ or Note 8 smartphone to a Samsung DeX station, the smartphone functions as the car's mobile data terminal and streamlines public safety workflows in the field. This setup allows the officers to have full data capability while maintaining the ability to do other critical tasks.

Additionally, Samsung Galaxy smartphones include defense-grade mobile data security powered by Samsung Knox, ensuring the organization's data is secure and helping achieve Criminal Justice Information Services (CJIS) compliance.

"Smartphones are constantly becoming a key tool for public safety agencies. Using in-car computer systems, officers can access valuable information while doing their mission-critical activities. Therefore, we come up with an innovative automotive solution that can transform your car's interface into a computer," says Chris Ryan, CEO of Strike Group Australia.

Strike's Alpha Car Cradle is an enterprise-grade phone holder designed to charge, hold, and protect smart devices while you drive. Clients have used Strike's world-renowned cradle in various technology integration solutions. Strike has designed specific cradles for the entire Samsung range.

Strike's solution transforms the Strike Alpha Car Cradle into an integral part of a complete enterprise mobility system. We do this by integrating it with the Samsung Dex Station and further connecting the cradle to an inbuilt screen. Its integration allows seamless mobile computing access both in the patrol car and in the field, which increases effectiveness and productivity for the public safety officers.

At Strike, we design our products to be both practical and powerful while recognizing the needs of different industries including military, emergency services, police, fire, ambulance, or anyone else who requires better enterprise mobility.
