

Cash plays a part in finances

AS we enter a new financial year it's timely to think about the role of cash in your investment portfolio.

It is a fundamental principle that you should spread your funds over three areas - cash, property and shares - but how much you should have in each of these areas depends on your goals and your risk profile.

The role of cash is to give you liquidity whenever you need it, but the problem with cash is that you have no chance of capital gain, and you also pay tax in full on the income.

In contrast, the bulk of the returns from property and shares usually come by way of capital gains on which there is no tax until you sell.

Also, if the income from your shares comes by way of franked dividends, you may pay no tax on the income at all if you earn less than $80,000 a year.

Another fundamental principle is that whenever there is a chance of capital gain, there is a chance of capital loss.

This is why you should never buy property and shares unless you have a 5-10 year time frame in mind - this will give you time to ride out the down cycles.

Obviously it is a waste of your precious resources to leave money idle in savings accounts earning minimal interest.

Noel Whittaker

So if you have a home mortgage, use most of your spare cash to reduce the loan.

Provided you have a redraw facility, you can always get your money back when you need it.

If you don't have a mortgage, but aren't prepared to invest in property and shares at this stage, you can maximise your returns by using some of the online accounts offered by banks or even putting it on term deposit.

If you choose the last mentioned option I suggest you don't lock it up for more than a year.

It would be a shame to be locked into a rate if the interest rate cycle starts to move upwards again.

Noel Whittaker is a director of Whittaker Macnaught, a division of St Andrew's Australia. This advice is general in nature and readers should seek their own expert advice before making financial decisions.

Waves of success

Entrepreneurs find their own niche

THEY may be at the helm of a company with a $16 million turnover today, but just over a decade ago they were over-enthusiastic 20-somethings throwing hunks of ice at a 1974 Toyota Celica, motivated by a pipe dream of inventing the world's first hail-proof car cover.

That didn't quite come off. The only tangible result was a sad trip to the wrecking yard.

But fate had greater plans for Chris Ryan and Adam Rockett.

The pair weathered numerous failed business attempts, including wine distribution and reselling phone handsets in London, before they found their niche with Strike Group Australia, which imports and distributes telecommunications products and accessories.

"We are slightly different in that we don't try and stock everything that's ever been made," Mr Ryan, 29, said.

"We believe in promoting good brands and focusing on what we do well.

"We have large telco-style businesses (as customers) like Optus, Telstra, Hutchison Vodafone, Fone Zone and Crazy John's.

"We just went in pit bull-style to try and open the door, and once the door opened we did a lot of listening to our customers to develop that relationship.

"We were young and green and said our fair share of stupid things, but people appreciate someone who is trustworthy, ethical and honest."

Both directors often use surfing as a business-building activity, listing Moffat, Marcoola, Caloundra and Noosa as among their favourite spots for a wave.

Mr Ryan said challenges for the business included an endlessly fluctuating dollar and the economic downturn.

"We've found our customers and the public in general are looking for quality more so than a cheap product," he said.

"We thought our cheaper products

RIDING HIGH: Strike Group Australia directors Adam Rockett and Chris Ryan have built a successful business in the telecommunications industry. PHOTO: FIONA HARDING/CONTRIBUTED would go better, but the better quality ones are selling because the consumer doesn't want to waste money on cheap imports.

"I think you make money in good times and fortunes in bad times, and there's a great opportunity for Strike to take advantage of what's happening.

"When the economy has been super strong, business has been a bit too easy, and now that it's tough times, it sorts the men from the boys, so to speak."

Australian companies raise $60b despite crisis

AUSTRALIA'S capital markets raised a record $60 billion of new equity during the 2008/09 financial year, defying expectations of a funding squeeze, says business advisory firm KPMG.

KPMG said that despite turbulent trading conditions Australian capital markets managed to raise record levels of new equity.

"In one of the more turbulent trading periods of recent decades, Australian capital markets proved to be resilient," KPMG said.

"Over $60 billion was raised during 2008/09, the vast majority from rights issues and private placements."

KPMG national head of mergers and acquisitions Rob Bazzani said placements vastly outstripped initial public offerings as a source of equity raising in the financial year just ended.

Your Local, Independent Optometrist

DAVEY & ASSOCIATES
D&A OPTOMETRISTS

Brian Davey | Tanya Revell | Pam Dreyer

AT TWO CONVENIENT LOCATIONS

Maroochydore
5443 3211

Kawana (Birtinya)
5437 9555

2014/007/aaH

We are proud stockists of

HOW CAN WE SAVE YOU MONEY

$1299 or only $18/week

3 year on site warranty
6 way power surge protector, free on site set-up

- MS Office Home & Student 2007
- Trend Micro Internet Security 2009
- Microsoft Windows XP Home edition
- Cooler Master Elite
- Pioneer DVR - 217 BK black DVD RW Sata
- Seagate 500 GB Sata II 16 MB HDD
- King Max 2GB DDR2 800 (PC 6400)
- Gigabyte GA- G41M
- ES2L GS! AIO Matx / MB
- Intel CD2 E7400 (2.8 GHz) 1066FSB 3MB
- Microsoft Desktop 600 USB KB & Mouse
- Asus VH 192D 19 Widescreen (HD 10000:1)

MOOLOOLABA COMPUTERS
FOR A SERVICE YOU CAN COUNT ON

PH: 5444 8853
Open Mon to Sat 8.30am-5.00pm

25-402/18aaH

MEET YOUR TEAM

Dawn Stubbs - Marketing Strategist
Ph 5430 8013

