

How to Write a Literature Review for Your Research Paper?

Research papers are an important part of higher education worldwide. One of the most important parts of a research paper is the literature review. However, it has been observed that students, in increasing numbers, find it difficult to write my college essay. When people think of literature review, they imagine a deep philosophical quest that requires a lot of time and energy. There is no doubt that literature reviews are hard to write; however, experts have devised a method through which you will be able to write a literature review with minimum effort and energy.

But before we embark on learning to write a research paper efficiently, we must first know what a literature review is. A literature review is an important part of any research paper. It is the search and evaluation of available literature in your area of interest or the area that is relevant to your topic. Literature review must answer these four important questions: Does it survey the relevant literature? Does it clearly mould the research article into its summary? Does it critically analyze the data provided in the relevant literature? Does it logically present the data?

If you know the technique of writing an annotated bibliography, you can skip this paragraph, but I doubt that you know it. So, the expert researchers have devised a road map of writing a literature review that passes through a town called annotated bibliography. Writing an annotated bibliography is quite a simple thing. Select a piece of literature and write its complete citation on the top. After that, start with a brief introduction of the author. Although the introduction of the author is not compulsory, yet it is a good practice. After that, provide a complete research question that is discussed in the literature that you have selected. Following the research question, discuss the methodology and research design. After that, provide the results and findings of the research, along with the implications of the study. After that, the last step is to discuss how this research article is relevant to your research paper and how it will help you. And you are done. You have learned how to write an annotated bibliography so far. It is the first step towards writing the literature review.

Although writing an annotated bibliography is a pretty simple method, however, if you are still struggling with it, it is better to take help from a professional essay writer service. You can also take help from an essay writing service in your social circle, and they will help you with that. Otherwise, if you want to do it yourself, the best way is to go to google and search for google scholar. It is the best place to look for research articles that can be used for the annotated bibliography. And when you have selected the research article, it is simple to find the information required for writing the annotated bibliography. You will just have to read the research article to find the relevant information.

Now is the time to simply convert the annotated bibliography into the literature review that you were so afraid of. When I write essay for me, I make my literature review invincible with this approach. You need to review more than one article or research in your literature review. The key is to make the annotated bibliography of each research paper and paste them together on one page. After doing that, now is the time to remove the bibliographic entries and put them together on a new page at the end of the document. Now, analyze each annotation again, join those with similar research questions, and make one paragraph. Similarly, those annotated bibliographies which have opposing results will be glued together into another paragraph.

There is one additional thing that you may have to do in the literature review. Once you have organized the annotated bibliography perfectly, you will have to add few sentences to glue it together. Of course, in any form of writing, building a logical connection is necessary, and that's what you will do in this step. Similarly, you might as well want to incorporate your analyses to make the overall work look better. Magically, you now have the literature review that has been haunting you for months.
