Interactive Journaling

All of our workbooks are designed to engage readers in the interactive journaling process.

Foundational Theory

The interactive journaling process includes components of the transtheoretical model of change (Prochaska and Velicer 1997). Through this theoretical model of behavior change, change is viewed as a process involving several states: precontemplation, contemplation, preparation, action, maintenance, and termination. The transtheoretical model of change provides an integrative framework for how individuals may progress through the various stages of behavior change, and move towards embracing and maintaining a particular behavior. The program components and workbooks within this catalog encourage individuals to reflect on the choices that have led to their current situation and make acceptable choices of action in the future. Each workbook is designed to guide users from the precontemplation stage to the contemplation, preparation, or action stage of change.

This unit provides an overview of aggravated and simple assault as well as the effects of each on victims.

Unit 5: Robbery

This unit discusses robbery, the taking or attempting to take anything of value (actual or perceived) from another person by force or threat of force. Robbery is often considered a violent crime because it occurs face to face.

Unit 6: Hate and Bias Crime

This unit discusses hate and bias crimes. These crimes are motivated by hostility and prejudice against a person based on his or her race, religion, sexual orientation, disability, or ethnicity/national origin. Most victims are targeted because they represent a particular group rather than because of any personal conflict or problem with the offender.

Unit 7: Gang Crime

This unit discusses gang crime, which includes, but is not limited to: graffiti, extortion, drug sales, burglary, home invasion, physical assault, sexual assault, and murder.

Unit 8: Sexual Assault

This unit discusses sexual assault and includes examples of both physical and nonphysical force. Physical force includes using a weapon, hitting, kicking, choking, or holding someone down. Nonphysical force or "coercion" includes verbally threatening a victim into doing something he or she doesn't want to do. Although most reported cases involve women as victims, men also are sexually assaulted.

Unit 9: Child Abuse and Neglect

This unit discusses the four main types of child maltreatment: physical abuse, child neglect, sexual abuse, and emotional abuse. These may occur separately or in combination. Emotional abuse is almost always present when other forms are identified.

Unit 10: Domestic Violence

This unit discusses domestic violence, a pattern of coercive behaviors used against an individual's intimate partner. These behaviors may include one or more of the following: physical, sexual, emotional, psychological, and financial abuse.

Unit 11: Drunk and Impaired Driving

This unit discusses drunk and impaired driving and its effects on victims. People who drive in a drunk or impaired condition create a major problem in our country today.

Unit 12: Homicide

This unit discusses homicide, defined as murder (killing another person with prior intent to kill that particular victim or anyone who gets in the way and with no legal excuse or authority) or manslaughter (killing another person without prior intent).

Unit 13: Making Amends

The primary goal of this curriculum is to prevent further victimization by helping offenders become aware of the impact of crime on victims and communities. It is important for participants to acknowledge their wrongdoing, confront themselves, and make amends for the harm they have caused.

"Education is the key that unlocks the lives of others and for leaving your community and world better than you found it."

- Marian Wright Edelman
