

As we enter the summer months, things typically slow down for us and we tend to get caught up. Thanks for your support and patience during the spring.

It would appear that commodity prices will remain flat for the next few months. There seems to be a pause in the market, wanting to increase, but there has not been an increase in demand. My guess is that there is so much money in the markets, chasing so few returns, that it is keeping the markets somewhat inflated. See MillerCoors, LME and Congress. Having said that, it is unclear about pricing for next year - only medical insurance premiums will increase for sure. Enough said.

Thanks - Mark and staff.
