

1. Start on 600-800 Grit stone/paper of your choice. We use diamond stone.
2. Lay the 3 blade broadhead flat on the stone. If you have a 3 blade with a pyramid tip, make sure to always keep the broadhead flat, otherwise you will risk messing up the tip.
3. The method of how you do the strokes is up to you. We have seen success doing it back and forth, just forward, just backward, and even in a circular motion. We recommend doing back and forth = 1 stroke.
4. Do 10 strokes on each side and carefully run your finger along the blade. Repeat this until it starts to feel sharp.
3 blades can be deceptive on how sharp they are, cutting paper with them can be tricky. We suggest carefully running your finger along the blade and/or shaving hair to judge sharpness.
5. When the blade feels sharp and can start to shave hair, do 5 strokes on each side. Repeat until you cannot get it any sharper (it should shave hair with no problem). Finish with 1 stroke on each side and stropping backwards. We have found that 600 or 800 grit is all you need get the broadhead hair shaving, hunt ready sharp.
If further sharpening is desired, move to 1000-1200 grit and repeat step 5 (5 strokes on each side). ***
