PACKING TIPS: HOW TO PACK FOR A CAMPING IN AUSTRALIA

Camping is meant to blur the distinction between domestic life and complete immersion in nature. Having reliable camping essentials on hand will allow you to appreciate the entire experience without the drama that can alter it.

- Prepare for Unexpected Weather: Preparing for all weather conditions, regardless of the destination, can make or break a voyage. Plan for unexpected weather by bringing additional clothing options, such as tank tops and rain garments, or have a backup plan. Always consult weather websites before going camping to avoid encountering unexpected weather.
- Check The Camping Permit: Numerous Australian campgrounds require camping permits. This is particularly true within Australia's national parks. Refrain from ruining your camping experience by failing to obtain the proper license and being denied access to your ideal campsite.
- Follow The Rules: If you've been following the news, you know that wildfires are a significant issue in many locations. If you are camping in the backcountry, likely, you will not be permitted to have a fire. If you intend to have a campfire, reserve a campsite with pre-established fire rings and stay abreast of applicable regulations.

- Leave No Trace: This phrase reminds you to leave the campsite as tidy as when you arrived. If you prefer to cook outdoors, carry garbage bags to dispose of your kitchen waste.
- Pay Attention to Night Temperature: Unless you're trekking in the tropics, the temperature drops at night in many destinations. Ensure everyone in your group has a sleeping bag with a high enough rating so no one wakes up shivering in the middle of the night.
