

All technical data presented on this website has been prepared for the use of professionals involved in the design, specification, installation and repair of copper and copper alloy piping systems in buildings. It has been compiled from information sources that the Copper Development Association Inc. (CDA) believes to be competent. However, ICS Industries, Inc. and its subsidiaries assume no responsibility or liability of any kind in connection with this technical data or its use by any person or organization and makes no representations or warranties of any kind thereby.

The information contained in this technical data is intended solely as a guide for the design professional and represents minimum recommendations and requirements. These should in no way be substituted for sound engineering practice and judgment. Local codes should be consulted and used to modify this technical data to meet actual project requirements.