

HAND BRAIDED JUTE

The hand braided weave of jute fibers creates a one-of-a-kind rug. Jute is a natural fiber; therefore, it is common to see variation of color, texture and weave. There can be a wide color variance in natural fibers and each jute braid is made of a special blend of undyed and bleached fibers. The bleached fibers will revert back to their natural color over time as all natural fibers do. Additionally, the time consuming process of hand braiding creates textural irregularities and skewing. These variations may sometimes be apparent and other times go unnoticed. These unique qualities are not considered to be a defect in material or workmanship, but rather appreciated as the beauty of nature.
