

lingerie lovers

Luva Huva is a London-based company that's putting the love back into lingerie. Their online shop features a dazzling array of ladies' intimates and pyjamas alongside a simple but sassy selection of camis, t-shirts, dresses and knitwear. Whether your preferred undie option is classic or cute, there are plenty of styles to take your fancy, from polka dots and frills to clean lines and feminine cuts; and everything is made using ethically sourced and sustainable fabric, including organic soy, bamboo and cotton, end-of-line remnants and vintage lace. Time to put some glamour back into your undergarments!

Lovely label and online store Alchemy is home to the delightful handmade wares of Australian artist Belinda Evans, who uses high-quality natural materials to produce textiles, ceramics, jewellery and these ingenious home weaving kits. Create your own whimsical wall hangings with a 13-piece kit that contains all you need to weave your magic, including a loom and bobbin handcrafted from Australian hardwoods. Each kit features a hand-dyed yarn set inspired by Australia's natural landscape, so you can lose yourself in a seaside holiday, eucalyptus forest or fields of summer wildflowers. Get your weave on!

a perfect circle

Purveyors of colourful floor rugs and throws, Argentinian/Australian brand Pampa have a cuddly new range of homewares in the shape of round Monte Cushions. Handmade on a circular loom from hand-dyed sheep's wool and finished with colourful pom-poms, these cushions (also available in square designs) come from the remote reaches of Argentina, fairly traded to support local artisans.
