Joseph Keilberth (1908–1968) was a German conductor renowned for his interpretations of Richard Wagner's operas. He was born on April 19, 1908, in Karlsruhe, Germany, and died on July 20, 1968, in Munich, Germany. Keilberth is particularly famous for his association with the Bayreuth Festival, where he conducted numerous performances of Wagner's works.

Keilberth's career as a conductor began in the 1930s, and he quickly gained recognition for his interpretations of Wagner's music. He conducted at various opera houses in Germany and beyond before becoming closely associated with the Bayreuth Festival, which is known for its exclusive focus on Wagner's operas. Keilberth conducted at Bayreuth from 1951 until his death in 1968. He is especially celebrated for his conducting of the "Ring Cycle" and other major Wagnerian works at the festival.

Joseph Keilberth's conducting style was marked by a deep understanding of Wagner's music and a commitment to fidelity to the composer's intentions. His interpretations are often praised for their clarity and balance, allowing the nuances of Wagner's complex scores to shine through.

Keilberth's career was tragically cut short when he died suddenly of a heart attack at the age of 60. Despite his relatively brief time as a conductor, he left a lasting legacy in the world of opera, particularly in the realm of Wagnerian music. His recordings of Wagner's operas, many of which were made during his tenure at Bayreuth, continue to be highly regarded by opera enthusiasts and are considered classics of the genre.
