THE MANIFESTO

'New Schoolers', who are they ➔ Winemakers whose goal is to bring Italian wine into a more modern stage, using a more contemporary approach getting rid of certain cliches and traditional techniques. The dispute of 'Old School VS New School' reached its peak during the 90s, when all winemakers of the country were divided into two factions, one using the big barrels typical of the Italian tradition and the other importing small barrels from France, following the example and the success of the popular Super Tuscans. The traditionalists were accusing the innovators of treason, while on the other side, their wines were considered harsh, unpleasant and not clean by the counterpart: even the press was divided, as the international newspapers were awarding the use of French oak and new techniques, the Italian press fiercely defended the more traditional wine makers. This dispute led to an undeniable generational conflict within many wineries between parents and their adult children: I highly recommend watching the beautiful documentary 'Barolo boys' which explains the causes and effects of the dispute on Barolo and Italian wine in general.

Wine Making principles ➔ First principle: for the 'New Schoolers', tradition is a precious resource, not a burden. They don't necessarily have to follow the imprinting of their ancestors, if a different kind of oak or grape gives better results than the traditional way, there is no shame in breaking the rules and prove the 'Old Schoolers' wrong.

Second principle: the winemaker can give his/her imprinting in the cellar by using small barrels or blending different grape varieties. The style of the winery is its signature that is guaranteed (although more standardized) throughout the years and different vintages.

Third principle: more approachable wines. While traditional Italian wines are easily recognizable for their vibrant and straightforward character, 'New schoolers' like to produce more round and less edgy wines that can age well but are already enjoyable on their young age.

Their wines ➔ Intense, round, broad, fruity with good presence of tertiary flavors (the ones given by Oak). The presence of the man is perhaps stronger than the presence of the nature as the imprinting is mainly given in the cellar, although it is impossible to have a great wine without a great soil and healthy grapes. More opulent and 'operatic' than the straightforward and 'rock and roll' Old school wines, they have shown good longevity throughout the years.

Francesco's considerations ➔ Nowadays, the gap between the two different approaches (or we should say Philosophies) has been reduced, because both factions are following the principles of the tradition while welcoming new techniques and technologies, for a beautiful and charming 'back to the future effect'.

Cupano Vino Rosso Igt Song: Tous les Memes by Stromae. It would be difficult to sum up Lionel Cousin in a few lines, so I will only say that the French cinematographer and the wife Ornella, have managed to tailor a beautiful French dress on Brunello, creating a unique combination of elegance and complexity by breaking out of the box of Tuscan tradition, becoming a legend of Montalcino wines that will be deeply missed and remembered for generations. This blend of 3 different vintages is informal and outspoken, with notes of Maraschino cherry, red flowers, red currants and a balsamic note with a twist of sage. Mouth is youthful and enjoyable with a floral sensation to enhance the freshness of the wine and a grippy tannin that is perfectly integrated in the structure. Deep red ruby, with great intensity of aromas: blackberries, plum, ripe currants with a beautiful floral note of wisteria and a light note of freshly brewed coffee, the bouquet is very neat and elegant. In the palate is vigorous, with an explosion of blackberries and balsamic notes of eucalyptus: tannins are beautifully integrated in the structured despite the young age of the wine, with a lingering, rich and savory finish. Siro Pacenti Rosso di Montalcino Doc 2020 Song: Country House by The Blur. The story of the Pacenti family sums up the transition that Italian wine had in the 80s, going from the father Siro, a farmer who would grow grapes among other crops, to the son Giancarlo, a more methodical and technological winemaker who converted the family farm into a successful winery. This Rosso di Montalcino has a stunning intensity, with notes of wild rose, blackberry, black currant and an elegant note of sandalwood due to the use of small barrels. Mouth is succulent, with a generous presence of alcohol balanced by a refreshing sensation of maraschino cherry, red fruits and a firm tannin that is beautifully integrated in the structure.
