THE STATE OF AMERICAN CULTURE

Doja Cat's latest music video, "Demons", has garnered a lot of attention since its release in early September. Bulging black eyes, devilish horns, and blood have been the running theme for the release of her fourth studio album, Scarlet. The superstar's hellish artistic expression has caught the eye of both the secular and christian world, but this is no surprise.

In 2021, we watched as Lil Nas X casted himself to hell while giving a lap dance to the devil["Montero" music video] and advertised a satanic-themed shoe that was quickly pulled off the market. Earlier this year, we saw Sam Smith and Kim Petras depict a satanic ritual on-stage at the 2023 Grammys for their hit song, "Unholy".

The use of satanic imagery and idolatry is nothing new for Hollywood. Many of these artists are not followers of Christ nor do some even believe in the existence of God; therefore, they do not realize the spiritual consequences they suffer when partaking in such things.

Across social media, we've seen thousands of comments from the church condemning Doja Cat; however, we are to have the heart of Christ when it comes to those who are still in darkness. The bible compares them to sheep without a shepherd as Jesus looked upon the lost with compassion (Matthew 9:35-38). As servants of the Lord, we are called to be lights to these places and people that our carnal selves want to judge, but this is why we rely on the righteousness of Jesus and not our own (Ephesians 5:8-9; Matthew 5:14-16).
