

Acknowledgments

A career is a series of events. My orchestral career began almost 40 years ago when two friends, David and Shimmy Burstyn showed me how to hand copy parts and play along with recordings. Their patience, knowledge and friendship got me started with my love of orchestral music.

A teacher to a musician is like the sun to a planet, necessary to the point of life itself. Emory Remington taught hundreds if not thousands of students in his long career at Eastman, yet his personal guidance, wisdom, musicianship and knowledge made me feel unique and special. This is so important to an artist it is almost immeasurable. Thank you "Chief". Your approval of Joyce as "the right gal for you", changed my life for the better, forever!

A special thank you to my parents, Arthur and Helen Cherry and my maternal grandmother, Lena Goldstein, all non-musicians, who encouraged me nevertheless with my career choice in music as a performer on the trombone, by exposing me to my first musical experiences and showering me with love and having faith in my aspirations.

The woman at my side for over 30 years, my wife Joyce has been a beacon of love, a tower of strength and a sharing partner like no other. Our musical experiences together have been full of beauty and meaningful. Thank you Joyce!

Putting together a project like this one can be overwhelming at times. Without the help of my son Avi, this project would never have been completed. His many hours of work sorting, cleaning, setting up the web site and many other items were directly responsible for getting things done. Bravo Avi!!

Over the years many musicians have been a great inspiration and help to me. I wish to thank them as this time, as it is through them that I was able to develop my musical and orchestral skills:

(alphabetical order)

Kazuyoshi Akiyama	former Music Director, Vancouver Symphony
Ed Anderson	Professor of Trombone, Indiana U, former Bass Trombone, Cleveland Orchestra
Dr. Donald Hunsberger	former Music Director, Eastman Wind Ensemble
Donald Knaub	former Trombone Professor, Eastman School of Music
Robert Oades	former trumpet National Arts Centre Orchestra
Gordon Pulis	former principal trombone, Toronto Symphony
Gerard Schwarz	music director, Seattle Symphony
Henry C. Smith III	former Principal Trombone, Philadelphia Orchestra
Vancouver Symphony Orchestra	Low Brass colleagues, 1974 to the present: Greg Cox, Dennis Miller, Doug Sparkes, Ellis Wean
Eugene Watts	Canadian Brass Trombonist