

A person who draws and labels a map is called a cartographer.

When they colour a political map (map showing different countries or states), they use minimum number of colours possible. The only condition they keep in mind is: The countries or states which share a border cannot be in the same colour.

 Keeping the above condition in mind, let us colour the political map of India with least number of colours possible.

POLITICAL MAP OF INDIA

The total number of colours I used:

Note: The map drawn above is not to scale.