How the Teacher's Teacher Online Learning Platform Works

Several days prior to the start of the course, participants will receive an email with instructions for accessing the course.

A week's material is posted at the start of each week. Participants are expected to read content and review various resources, write replies/answer questions, share experiences, and engage in discussions with the course facilitator and other participants. None of the assignments are completed in "real-time;" you can work at the times that best suit your own schedule. Participants should expect to spend about 1 hour per PD hour for the duration of each course. This time is best spread out over the course of each week in several sittings to get the most benefit out of the class discussions. There are no graded assignments; you earn the credits described above if you fulfill the course requirements.

The courses are very interactive. The facilitator is online daily responding to the participants, answering questions and engaging in discussions. Educators have the opportunity to share ideas, experiences and strategies with teachers from other schools.
