Saw dawn creep across the sky,
and all the gulls go flying by.
I saw the sea put on its dress of blue midsummer loveliness, and heard the trees begin to stir green arms of pine and juniper.
I heard the wind call out and say: "Get up, my dear... the dream"

Shall I compare you to a summer's day?
You are more lovely and more moderate:
Harsh winds disturb the delicate buds of May,
and summer doesn't last long enough.

A full-page photograph of a beach scene. On the left, a tall palm tree stands prominently. In the foreground, a person is sitting on a beach chair, surrounded by various items like a surfboard and bags. In the background, three lifeguard stands are visible on the sand. The sky is a clear, light blue. The text is centered in the upper half of the image.

But your eternal beauty won't fade,
nor lose any of its quality.
And you will never die,
as you will live on in my enduring poetry.
As long as there are people still alive to read poems this sonnet will live, and you will live in it.

That summer,
Those few days of sun,
They burned the arid fields.
And with them, Me.

Long years of practise bore Till bye and bye these Bargemen

Walked singing on the shore.

Sunset Bl

We lose
Because we win...

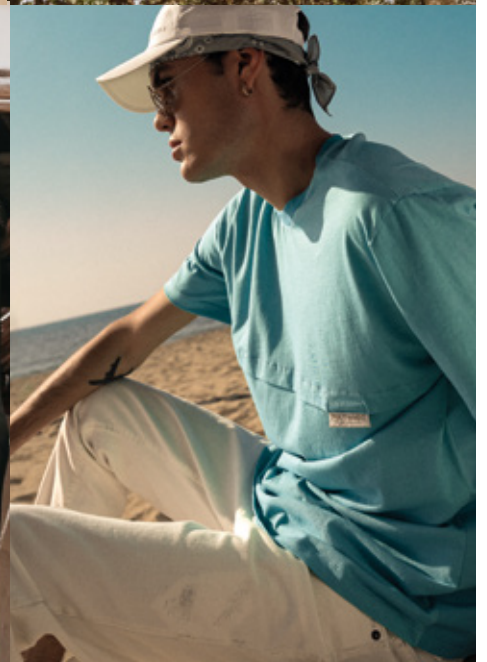

It's all I have to bring today
This, and my heart beside
This, and my heart, and all the fields
And all the meadows wide
Be sure you count - sh'd I forget...

That shall Aurora be East of Eternity!

Summer, the sun that warmed us everyday
That brought us amazing sunsets
And that now burns me hard

A tropical beach scene at sunset. The sky is a mix of orange, yellow, and light blue. Several tall palm trees are silhouetted against the sky. In the foreground, the dark silhouettes of people are visible on the beach, some standing and some sitting. The ocean is visible in the background with gentle waves.

It seems to me...
we had an experience worth repeating.

Maybe some peace it'll bring too
Summer, who gave its perfume to many flowers
The summer who created our love
