HAT COMPONENTS

VISOR

The stiff projecting brim or bill located at the front of the cap. It extends outward from the front of the cap and is designed to shield the eyes from the sun or light. The visor is an essential part of the cap, providing shade and helping to improve visibility by reducing glare. It can come in various lengths and shapes, depending on the style of the cap.

CROWN

The crown of a cap is how high or low it sits on your head. A smaller crown means the cap sits higher up, while a larger crown means it sits lower and covers more of your head. It's basically about how deep the cap goes when you wear it.

PANELS

The individual sections or pieces of fabric that are stitched together to form the main body of the cap. Most caps, like baseball caps or hats, are constructed from multiple panels sewn together. These panels are usually shaped and stitched together to create the crown of the cap. The number of panels can be 5 or 6 pieces.

CLOSURE

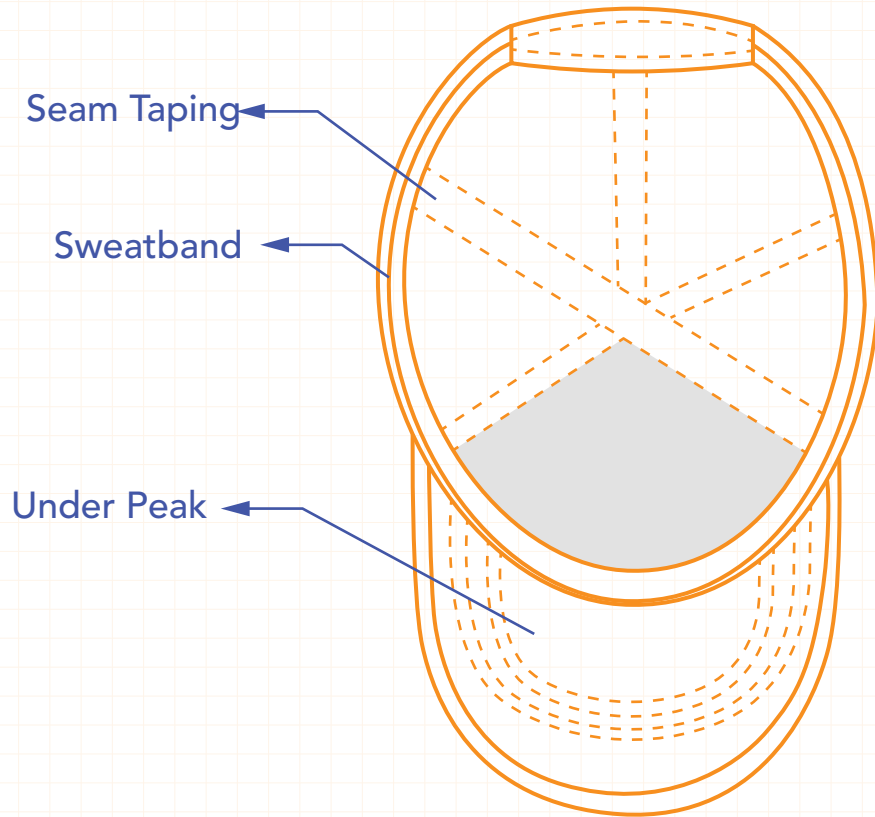

The mechanism or method used to adjust the size and secure the cap on the wearer's head. It's the part of the cap that allows for size customization and helps ensure a snug or comfortable fit. Closures can come in various forms such as buckles, snap-backs, Velcro closure and plastic hooks.

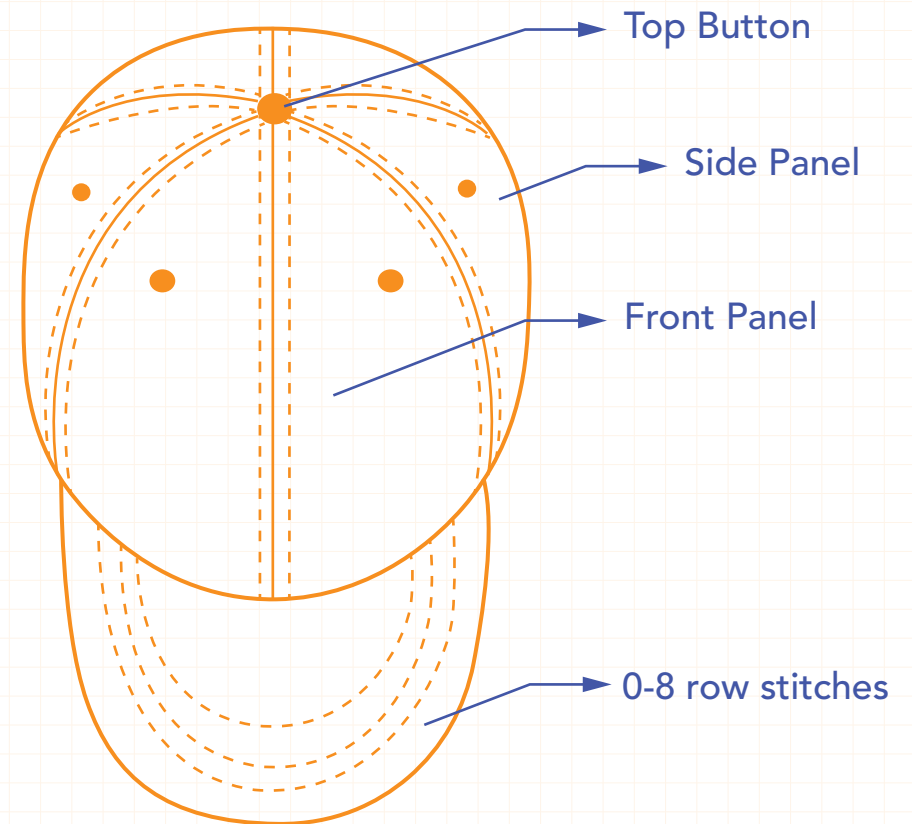

PROFILE

The shape or height of the cap's crown when viewed from the side. It describes how the cap sits on the head and the overall vertical depth or height of the cap's front panel. Caps can have different profiles, which typically fall into three main categories: Low Profile, Mid Profile and High Profile.
