INFORMATION TO CONSIDER

How to arrange fence installation on new housing estates

Installing a fence in a housing estate involves several considerations, and it can be complex. Fortunately, the expert team at A CLASS FENCING SOLUTION PTY LTD is well-versed in estate boundary fences. If you're uncertain about the fencing regulations set by your developer or local council, our team is available to help with all the necessary details.

Each housing estate, council, and state has its own set of guidelines for installing a new fence. While most neighbours are considerate and make the process easier, the key to handling shared fencing issues is to maintain open communication throughout the process.

Contact your council

Begin by reaching out to your estate's sales office, management team, or your local council to obtain contact details for your neighbours. This is particularly important if your homes are at different stages of construction, and the owners may not be on-site yet.

Engage in communication with your neighbours.

Keep communication open with your neighbours and allow them to share their thoughts. Some may be fine with contributing once the fence is up, while others may want to be more involved. Be ready to listen and find a solution that works for everyone. After considering styles and options, get quotes from A CLASS FENCING SOLUTION PTY LTD. Once reviewed, proceed with the installation.

Remember, neighbours are required to share the cost of a proper boundary fence. If needed, a court can issue a fencing order, but it's best to come to a mutual agreement as you'll be living next to each other long-term.

What factors should be considered when installing a fence in a housing estate?

Fence style and material

Begin by contacting your estate's sales office, management team, or your local council to obtain your neighbours' contact information—this is especially crucial if your homes are at different stages of construction and the owners may not be on-site yet.

Estate Guidelines

Each housing estate, council, and state has its own guidelines for installing a new fence. Fortunately, most neighbours are considerate, making the process easier. The best way to handle shared fencing issues is by keeping communication channels open.
