"Jeremy's angry diatribe about Ellen made people feel uncomfortable," says a source.

JEREMY: ELLEN'S A 'B----!'

Tell us how you really feel! At an Aug. 23 charity event, Jeremy Piven was asked about working with Ellen DeGeneres, 58, on their late-'90s sitcom, Ellen – and he didn't hold back. "At first he pretended like he had no idea who she was, but then he changed his story and referred to her as a 'b----,'" says an eyewitness, explaining that Jeremy, 51, has long been rumored to be jealous of Ellen's post-sitcom success. "Someone tried to change the subject and talked about meeting Ellen in Hawaii once, but Jeremy just wouldn't stop. He said that Ellen's a 'taker' and probably got the trip for free." The rant shocked some in the room. "A charity fundraiser just isn't the place to trash-talk," says the eyewitness. Jeremy calls the story "completely false" and tells In Touch: "[I] was proud to be a part of that groundbreaking show."

AMANDA BEGS KANYE: HIRE ME!

Kanye West may soon be taking style cues from ... Amanda Bynes! "She reached out to Kanye several times via social media to try to send samples of her work. She's a big fan of the Yeezy brand, but thinks he needs to brighten up his collection a bit," a source says of the actress, 30, who is studying at LA's Fashion Institute of Design & Merchandising and doing well after a breakdown that included multiple DUI arrests and stints in a psych ward. "Amanda thinks she could spice up the brand with bright colors and pastels." Kanye, 39, has yet to get back to her, but she isn't giving up. "She's also trying to reach him through the Kardashians. Amanda's determined to work with Kanye and will do anything to make that dream come true."

"She's been sketching designs for Kanye and really thinks her ideas are amazing," says a source close to Amanda.
