How we lived: The Houshamadyan Project

A Presentation by Vahe Tachjian

Houshamadyan was born from this simple and powerful idea: we should bring back to life the cities, towns and village in which Armenians lived in the Ottoman Empire by reconstructing our inheritance – the rich memory of the lives of our ancestors.

Houshamadyan is a non-profit organization founded in Berlin in 2010. The website www.houshamadyan.org appears in three languages: Armenian, English and Turkish.

Alongside written articles, the Houshamadyan website uses a great variety of multi-media tools, such as musical recordings of historic value, oral history testimonies, old photographs, pictures, old film footage, maps, podcasts and so on.

Every month, 3-4 new articles and new materials are added to the constantly growing website. More than 170 articles and family collections are already published.
