

WINES BY THE BOTTLE

This is our complete wine list from our room next door with nearly 2,000 bottles of wine in it, all laying flat, temperature-controlled, humidified and all. The idea with the room is you can go in, have a nose around, find something and drink it here or take it home with you. Or you can read the list and we'll go and get it for you. Take $15 off a bottle to take-home.

Lots of people ask us if our wine list has a theme. Do we specialise in local wines or international wines? Do we specialise in organic wines or natural wines? And so on... Well, we don't, and our wine list doesn't have a theme as such, but if it did, it would sound a bit like this: Our list is built around those who farm properly, grow good grapes and make their wine in a way that best shows time and place. It's our belief that the most interesting wines come from those who do all three and we try to support those who own their own vineyards, own their own wineries and those whose livelihoods depend on the grapes they grow and the wines they make.

Oh, and why so many New Zealand and Australian wines? Simple. For years now we've been trying to make wines that tasted like somewhere else, but we reckon we've got an interesting enough story to tell to start telling that ourselves. So while drinking something from Hawke's Bay that tastes like the Rhône might be your thing, it's not ours. Don't read this and freak out though, it's just if you want to drink Rhône Syrah you'll have to try the real thing.

We currently have 441 different wines to choose from.

MÉTHODE & CHAMPAGNE

It's worth noting that Champagne might suffer the greatest disconnect between the grower and the maker of all regions. In Champagne there are more than 19,000 growers yet more than 90% of that ends up in the hands of just 8 makers. Here [#] we have gone out of our way to showcase 'Grower Champagnes'; wines which are made by the same people as who farmed the grapes. Year in, year out, we think the most interesting Champagnes are made by those who have a permanent connection with the vineyards they tended to.

PÉTILLANT NATUREL

Pétillant Naturel, or Pet Nat for short, is a sparkling wine that finishes fermentation in the bottle, leaving it naturally sparkling. Cloudy too. It's not Champagne - it is its own drink designed to show off the fruity flavours in wine. Its method is too simple and delicious not to enjoy.

SHERRY

Forget that awful sweet stuff your grandmother used to put herself to sleep with. These are serious wines with a deliberately oxidative component which makes them nutty and rich. Listed from salty and bone dry to full rich and sweet. The perfect preprandial.

Delgado Zuleta Oloroso Cream	Sanlúcar de Barrameda, Spain	500mL 64

If you're trying to justify spending more than a hundred bucks on a bottle of sherry, make it one from Equipo Navazos. They're a group of winemakers from within the sherry triangle who got together and decided to bottle the best individual barrels (or 'bota'), rather than let them get blended away into the system. There's only ever one bottling of each bota. NZ gets just a handful of each every year. Chances are you'll never see the same one twice.

THE LIE OF THE LAND

It wouldn't be right to not give Marlborough Sav its own time. There isn't anything else quite like it and we think that's worth celebrating. Here you will only find the 'textbook' style that we became famous for. The rest are split over the next two categories.

FRUITY BUT NOT TOO SWEET WINES

Don't be a hater. Fruity doesn't have to mean sweet, but if it does, it should be accompanied by enough acidity to carry the sweetness, leaving it fresh, balanced and in complete harmony.

SKIN FERMENTED WHITES

Probably the most maligned and misunderstood wines in the bar, these weird, cloudy and puckered wines can get a bad rap. Mostly from those who haven't tried a good one yet, but don't worry, we've done the drinking for you and only listed the ones we think you will enjoy. Expect amazing new aromas, textures and flavours that you won't find in any other bracket.

RIESLING!

OK, we lied, there are probably two maligned and misunderstood wines on this list. Riesling's the other one. It's simply not possible to dislike one Riesling and in turn dislike them all. Riesling can run from bone dry, steely and mineralic through to dessert sweet but with amazing acidity and freshness. No two styles are the same. The only answer is to try them all.

DESSERT WINES

We're not really into 'late harvest' this or that. So often that's marketing speak for over-ripe grapes with plenty of acid added and sugar left in them. These are the real deal - botrytised, incredibly concentrated and totally worth the price paid.

ROSÉS ARE RED..

OK so I couldn't think of the next line but here are our rosés. The Black Estate Netherwood and Domaine Lucci wines feature a little bit of white wine to focus the palate and give direction. The Felton Road Vin Gris is a little more pale in colour.

PINOT NOIR

I'm gonna make a big call and say Pinot Noir is the Riesling of reds. I say this because Pinot Noir is equally as versatile and can come in so many forms. Impossible to categorise by style or flavours, we've gone back to listing it by region.

VIN DE SOIF

Pronounced "Vahn du swaf". Literally: "wines of thirst". These are the most thirst quenching reds on the planet. Plenty of bright red fruits and lifted aromatics and some so soft and supple you'll be describing them with words like 'juicy' and 'delicious'. Probably all suit a slight chill. Totally smashable. Be prepared to order a second.
