

The Country Folk collection pays homage to Lucy Loveheart's love of rustic life in the country and her appreciation of naïve and folk art. Lucy's home and studio are at the end of a long quiet country lane, surrounded by open fields. The collection features her Gypsy caravan, the wild creatures that visit her garden and her husband who looks after the birds that live in the many trees he has planted since they have been living there. It also features the vegetable garden and the green house she dreams of having one day.

The images in the collection are imbued with rich earthy tones and evoke the diversity of nature, the warmth of rural life and the dream of escaping to the country.
