We showed up ten minutes late to see Perkins after getting stuck in gridlock. But she assured us we’d still get the full treatment. She wrapped us in a heated blanket, then worked a papaya-enzyme scrub into our skin and extracted a few blackheads. After coating our face with a hydrating serum, she treated us to a blissful 20-minute massage on our face, shoulders, and feet. By the time we floated out the door, our skin looked gorgeous enough to stop traffic. Spa Facial, $90.
