The UPSCALE 40 CLUB

We searched for some of the most inspiring leaders in the Black Community. Forty dynamic individuals who are under 40 years which influence all spheres of life, including athletes, publicists, entrepreneurs, business leaders, lawyers and marketing executives, were identified and comprised this year’s 40 Club. These players overcame many obstacles in life, and their stories teach us that we can have community-changing careers with determination and dedication.

WORDS BY JONELL WHITT
Maria Taylor is a television host and producer. She was a two-sport player at UGA, on the volleyball team as an ALL-SEC player and on the basketball team. As a proud double dawg, Maria graduated from the University of Georgia’s Grady College of Journalism and Mass Communication and later earned her MBA from the Terry College of Business. Taylor’s extensive football knowledge is quite impressive.

The 6’2 tall, beautiful, smart host created quite the name for herself in the 2022 NFL football season as she moved on to NBC and joined the Sunday night Football studio show ‘Football Night in America.’ It’s the most-watched studio show in sports. Taylor is always poised and in a full fashionista-style wardrobe when serving as the first female full-time primary host. She is also a 2023 TEDx GA featured speaker.

When it comes to race and gender in a male-dominated industry, Taylor exclaims, “The reality is that all people are running the same race, and they’re just trying to get to that finish line, whatever that success or the goal. The real reality is that people of color, and specifically women of color, have way more hurdles in that race than anybody else. Still, we don’t sit around asking for pity, and we don’t sit around asking for anyone to help us.”
Diamond DeShields
WNBA Player
At just 27 years old, she is a WNBA All-Star, an ESPN ESY-award nominee, and a WNBA champion (Chicago Sky, 2021) and was chosen to play in the 2023 NBA Celebrity All-Star game. As much as she is celebrated for her athletic talents, she has also become recognized as a fashion force. She has easily fused her fancy style of play with her love of fashion. She is the face of world-known eye designers Oakley and has graced magazines and billboards for clothing designers, Fear of God, and many others.

LaMonica Madden
Associate Director, Inclusion Experience
LaMonica is the foremost thought leader and subject matter expert on the topic and practice of Multi-Cultural Marketing. Her work helps to ensure that Brands don’t get “Canceled” by holding them to a higher standard of real allyship to the communities that they wish to serve and by developing both organizational transformation and marketing strategies that ensure brands are “walking their talk” both behind the scenes and in front of the camera.

LaMonica has developed a proprietary framework for Influencer Marketing that not only amplifies black and brown content creators but helps to close the ethnic pay gap and addresses pay disparities suffered by marginalized creators by pairing them with brands seeking ways to authentically connect with minority audiences.

LaMonica is an Associate Director of Inclusion Experience at VMLY&R. She consults some of the world’s largest brands on organizational transformation with an emphasis on making brands more culturally cognizant.

She is a thought leader and digital storyteller and aims to bring out the human element in corporate advertising to create a deeper brand affinity between a brand and its consumers.

Before joining VMLY&R, LaMonica consulted and led brand, content, and digital strategies for both public and private sectors as well as small to mid-sized businesses before deciding that telling stories that globally shape and influence our modern culture was her passion.

Her expertise has been featured in publications such as Black Enterprise, Essence, Forbes, Rolling Out, and The Huffington Post.

Netta Jenkins
Author

She is the author of The Inclusive Organization, listed by Forbes as one of the top 4 DEI books to read. She is CEO of AeroDEI, a DEI tool that helps organizations measure and quantify the impact of their DEI initiatives through gamifying employee experience. Netta has been advising corporations and audiences of all kinds for years on the most effective strategies to address inequitable gaps. That led to a 300k+ LinkedIn audience and played a key factor in Forbes naming her as one of the top 7 Anti-Racism consultants in the world. She also gave a ground-breaking TEDx talk, “Reimagining the Workplace”.

Marcus W. Tyler
Multicultural Marketing Lead, Oncology

With over a decade of successfully growing businesses and building brand equity with global brands, Marcus now works at Eli Lilly. He leverages his brand marketing expertise to help people live longer, healthier, and more active lives. He recently oversaw the launch of the company’s first campaign targeted at Black metastatic breast cancer patients with a 41% higher mortality rate than the general population. As part of the pharmaceutical giant’s Multicultural Marketing hub, he is developing further marketing initiatives to attack other health disparities within the African-American and LatinX communities.
Hannah Ramanou

He built his huge portfolio of work by shooting some of the most notable names in the entertainment industry. Over the years Smith has worn many hats but with all his accomplishments, he never stops thinking about others. Currently he serves as a segment and casting producer for Viacom.

Candace Mitchell
Creator of Myavana App for Hair Analysis
Candace Mitchell is a graduate of Georgia Tech and CEO and developer of the Myavana App. What’s impressive to me is the fact that Candace was inspired to create her own brand from something not right in front of her but on top of her head. It was because of the crisis Mitchell was having with her own dry and damaged hair, bad hair coloring at salons and damaged hair experiences from using the wrong hair products she decided to turn her pain into profit.

With the Myavana app a person can use technology to get online customer service (with membership of course), and you are able to send your hair strands to their facility and obtain a scientific assessment of your elasticity, texture and porosity. They can use this analysis and determine the best type of products for your hair.

There are a staff of nine people working for Myavana that cater to more than 25k registered users on the free Myavana free mobile app. This is truly artificial intelligence and image recognition technology working at its best. Imagine eliminating the perils of buying a bunch of hair products to test only to discover you have wasted your money because nothing works! Hats off to Candace Mitchell truly thinking outside the box. Download the app and check out how to make your crown shine more radiantly,

Benaisha Poole-Watson is a Change Maker for the Culture

As an assertive businesswoman dedicated to making change in communities nationally. Her main objective in business is to economically empower people and put financial stability in their hands and mindset. She is also a real estate broker in more than 16 states. The icing on the cake is that she is a black female business owner; an entrepreneur and the owner of her own Federally Chartered Bank, Prime One Lending Group/Prime One Home Loans based in the state of Texas. They are direct lenders in every state including Alaska and Hawaii. She can also finance commercial real estate up to 650 million dollars.

One thing that Poole-Watson noticed was that the biggest problem in black communities is having access to capital. Benaisha saw the opportunity where she qualified to make a major move to own a bank.

Working as a real estate professional she was already at the pentacle of being in the real estate business selling 400 homes per month. “What I noticed in transactions is that 50% of our loans were being denied because we have job loss and credit issues that causes disruptions in our packets, we have life in our packet. I was tired of seeing our people of color not being able to pass go. They could make it around the monopoly table but not able to pass go. The other 50% that were getting approved were not being treated fairly with comparative rates and comparative services. So, me being able to provide this service was MY WHY. This is the reason I wanted to own my own bank”.

Crystal Renee Hayslett

Decided to pursue a career in music and acting. Her first opportunity on camera was landing a role in Oscar award winning Matthew Cherry’s short film, “This Time”. She also made appearances on BET’s “The Game” and “Stomp the Yard 2”. Currently Crystal can be seen in BET’s “Sistas”, the spin off “Zatima” and upcoming in Universal’s film “Praise This”, out this Spring.

She attended the University of Tennessee at Martin & received a bachelor’s degree in Mass Communications/Public Relations. funfact Upon graduating she moved to Washington, D.C. to work for the United States Senate.
DR. RUTH J. SIMMONS HAS DEMONSTRATED a willingness to break the mold with a fresh perspective and continuous inquisition into the history of slavery and injustices. Renowned for her work at Brown University, where she became the first African American woman to head an Ivy League University, Dr. Simmons has led many student-focused initiatives empowering well-rounded leaders.

She is the current President of Prairie View A&M University, previously holding the role at both Smith and Brown Universities. Dr. Simmons will continue to advance her efforts as a senior adviser to the president of Harvard University on engagement with Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) and a President’s Distinguished Fellow at Rice University.

For the full story of her life and legacy told by the distinguished scholar herself, her recently released memoir, Up Home: One Girl’s Journey, is now available.

“I came to understand the value of education, not just to enable me to make a good living, but to enable me to make a worthwhile life.”

—Dr. Ruth J. Simmons
