SOL DE ANDES SAUVIGNON BLANC

<https://gerrardseel.co.uk/products/sol-de-andes-sauvignon-blanc>

Sol De Andes Sauvignon Blanc has bright gooseberry aromas with a suggestion of more tropical, peachy fruit over the top. Fresh and lively on the palate with a clean refreshing acidity and a vibrant finish. Pleasingly long for such an affordable wine.

Sauvignon Blanc is an expensive grape to grow well. It is extremely vigorous and requires a great deal of training and pruning to keep it in check. Also, if the soil and climate it grows in are not totally suited to its requirements then the resulting wine can easily end up being either tart and lean or bland and flabby. Rest assured, however; you have nothing to worry about with this Sol De Andes Sauvignon Blanc.

ABOUT THE GROWER

In 1993, the founders of Sol De Andes embraced their dreams of taking full advantage of Chile's natural bounty to make great wines and founded their estate in the Maule Valley. The philosophy of Sol De Andes is to produce elegant and enjoyable wines that highlight the distinct characteristics of each grape variety by combining cutting-edge technology with traditional winemaking skills.

Poor soils, excellent exposure to sunshine and the absence of rain at harvest time are unique and invaluable conditions for the production of quality wines in Chile. On its daily journey over the Andes to the Pacific, the sun illuminates the vineyards and this was the inspiration for the Sol De Andes ("Sun From The Andes") name. The 450 hectares of Sol De Andes vineyards are located in the foothills of the Andes in the Maule, Casablanca and Colchagua Valleys where the influence of the Pacific moderates the climate and where the diurnal temperature fluctuation preserves the balance and freshness of the wines.

The Sol De Andes winery sits next to its oldest vineyards in San Clemente in the Maule Valley, where cutting-edge technology and traditional winemaking skills are combined to enable them to make the best possible wines.
